

Contents in full

TABLES OF CASES	xxxiii
TABLE OF INTERNATIONAL CASES	liii
TABLE OF STATUTES	lv
TABLE OF STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS	lviii
TABLE OF INTERNATIONAL TREATIES AND CONVENTIONS	lix
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS OF COMMONLY CITED WORKS	lx

1 Introduction	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 What is tort law?	2
1.2.1 What interests does tort law protect?	3
1.3 The disparate aims of tort law: a case study on Woodroffe-Hedley v Cuthbertson	8
1.3.1 Doing (corrective) justice	10
1.3.2 Compensation	11
1.3.3 Deterrence	17
1.3.4 Vindication	17
1.4 Tort law and the Human Rights Act 1998	18
1.5 A note on terminology	20
1.6 Conclusion	20
End-of-chapter questions	21
Further reading	21

PART I The tort of negligence 23

2 Introduction to the tort of negligence	27
2.1 Introduction	27
2.2 Mapping the historical development of the tort of negligence	29
2.3 Explaining the historical development of the tort of negligence	34
2.3.1 The influence of social and political thinking in an age of principles	35
2.3.2 A positive response to victims of workplace injuries	35
2.3.3 Supporting infant industries	36
2.4 The role of the modern law of negligence	37

2.5	The elements of the tort of negligence	38
2.5.1	Duty	39
2.5.2	Breach	39
2.5.3	Causation and remoteness	40
2.5.4	Putting it all together	40
2.6	Case example: X & Y v London Borough of Hounslow	43
2.7	Conclusion	52
	End-of-chapter questions	52
	Further reading	52
<hr/>
3	Duty of care: introduction and basic principles	54
3.1	Introduction	54
3.2	From Donoghue to Caparo —a brief history of the duty of care	57
3.3	Establishing a duty of care: Caparo Industries v Dickman	58
3.3.1	The three-stage ‘test’	59
3.3.2	The Caparo three-stage test—uncovered	63
3.3.3	The incremental approach	65
3.4	Where does this leave us?	66
3.5	Conclusion	68
	End-of-chapter questions	68
	Further reading	69
<hr/>
4	Omissions and acts of third parties	70
4.1	Introduction	71
4.2	Acts and omissions	72
4.2.1	Control	76
4.2.2	Assumption of responsibility	78
4.2.3	Creating or adopting risks	80
4.3	Summary of when a duty of care may be found in respect of omissions	81
4.4	Liability for acts of third parties: the general rule	81
4.5	When is there liability for the acts of third parties?	82
4.5.1	A special relationship between defendant and claimant	83
4.5.2	A special relationship between defendant and third party	86

4.5.3	Creating a source of danger	87
4.5.4	A failure to abate a known danger	88
4.6	Summary of when a duty of care may be found for the actions of third parties	90
4.7	Conclusion	91
	End-of-chapter questions	92
	Further reading	92
<hr/>
5	Psychiatric harm	93
5.1	Introduction	94
5.2	What is psychiatric harm?	95
5.3	The general exclusionary rule	96
5.4	'Primary' and 'secondary' victims	98
5.5	Primary victims	99
5.6	Secondary victims	102
5.6.1	Relationship with the immediate victim	106
5.6.2	Proximity in time and space	108
5.6.3	The means by which the 'shock' is caused	109
5.7	Beyond primary and secondary victims	111
5.7.1	Rescuers	111
5.7.2	Involuntary participants	115
5.7.3	Communicators of shocking news	116
5.7.4	Self-harm by the defendant	117
5.7.5	The 'assumption of responsibility' cases	118
5.8	Conclusion	120
	End-of-chapter questions	120
	Further reading	121
<hr/>
6	Public bodies	122
6.1	Introduction	123
6.2	The general exclusionary rule	124
6.2.1	Why is the judiciary reluctant to allow recovery?	124
6.3	The current position	127
6.4	The background to D v East Berkshire	131

6.4.1	The Osman case	131
6.4.2	The Z and TP & KM cases	135
6.4.3	The implications for domestic law	137
6.5	The emergency services and armed forces	138
6.5.1	The fire service	138
6.5.2	The ambulance service	142
6.5.3	The police	143
6.5.4	The coastguard	153
6.5.5	The armed forces	153
6.5.6	Duty: the emergency services and armed forces—at a glance	154
6.6	Other types of public body	155
6.6.1	Justiciability	155
6.7	The recognition of new types of claim—‘messed up lives’?	160
6.7.1	Education-based claims	160
6.7.2	Social claims	162
6.8	Conclusion	164
	End-of-chapter questions	165
	Further reading	166

7 Economic loss 167

7.1	Introduction	168
7.2	What is ‘pure’ economic loss?	169
7.3	Exceptions to the exclusionary rule: Hedley Byrne v Heller	174
7.4	Claims for pure economic loss in negligence before Murphy	176
7.5	Extending Hedley Byrne	181
7.5.1	A special relationship	181
7.5.2	Voluntary assumption of risk	182
7.5.3	Reasonable reliance	185
7.6	Beyond Hedley Byrne : the ‘will cases’ and a more flexible approach	188
7.7	Conclusion	193
	End-of-chapter questions	194
	Further reading	194

8 Breach	195
8.1 Introduction	196
8.2 A test of reasonableness	197
8.3 An objective standard	199
8.3.1 Children	203
8.3.2 Common practice and special skills	204
8.3.2.1 The Bolam test	204
8.4 Setting the standard of care	208
8.4.1 Probability that the injury will occur	208
8.4.2 Seriousness of the injury	210
8.4.3 Cost of taking precautions	211
8.4.4 Social value of the activity	212
8.5 A balancing act	214
8.5.1 The Compensation Act 2006	216
8.6 Establishing breach	217
8.7 Conclusion	219
End-of-chapter questions	219
Further reading	220

9 Causation and remoteness	221
9.1 Introduction	222
9.2 Factual causation—the ‘but for’ test	224
9.2.1 Explaining the test	225
9.2.2 Problems with the test	226
9.2.2.1 Multiple potential causes	226
9.2.2.2 ‘Unjust’ results 1: the mesothelioma exception	230
9.2.2.3 ‘Unjust’ results 2: failure to inform	237
9.2.2.4 Indeterminate causes	238
9.2.2.5 Loss of chance	240
9.2.2.6 Uncertain actions	244
9.2.3 Multiple sufficient causes	244
9.3 Legal causation	247
9.3.1 Remoteness	247
9.3.1.1 The ‘egg shell skull’ rule	250
9.3.2 Intervening acts	251
9.3.2.1 Later negligent acts	251
9.3.2.2 Acts of the claimant	253

9.4 Conclusion	254
End-of-chapter questions	255
Further reading	255
10 Defences to negligence	257
10.1 Introduction	258
10.2 Voluntarily assuming the risk (volenti)	258
10.2.1 Establishing the defence	260
10.3 Illegality	264
10.4 Contributory negligence	269
10.4.1 Did the claimant fail to exercise reasonable care for their own safety?	270
10.4.2 Did this failure contribute to the claimant's damage?	272
10.4.3 By what extent should the claimant's damages be reduced?	273
10.5 Conclusion	275
End-of-chapter questions	275
Further reading	276
PART II Special liability regimes	277
11 Occupiers' liability	281
11.1 Introduction	282
11.2 The Occupiers' Liability Act 1957	283
11.2.1 When is a duty owed?	284
11.2.1.1 Occupiers: 'control of premises'	285
11.2.1.2 Visitors: by invitation or permission only	287
11.2.1.3 Premises: including 'any fixed or moveable structure'	288
11.2.2 The standard of care	288
11.2.2.1 Children	290
11.2.2.2 'Persons in the exercise of a calling'	292
11.2.2.3 Warnings	292
11.2.2.4 Notices excluding liability	293
11.2.2.5 Faulty execution of work	294
11.2.2.6 Defences	296
11.3 The Occupiers' Liability Act 1957—annotated	296
11.4 The Occupiers' Liability Act 1984	298
11.4.1 Establishing a duty	299
11.4.1.1 Awareness of (or reasonable grounds to believe in the existence of) danger	302

11.4.1.2	Knowledge of (or reasonable grounds to believe in) the presence of a non-visitor in the vicinity of danger	303
11.4.1.3	Reasonable expectation of protection against the risk	304
11.4.2	The standard of care	304
11.4.2.1	Warnings	304
11.4.2.2	Risks willingly accepted by the non-visitor	305
11.5	The Occupiers' Liability Act 1984—annotated	305
11.6	The Occupiers' Liability Acts 1957 and 1984—at a glance	307
11.7	Conclusion	309
	End-of-chapter questions	309
	Further reading	310
<hr/>
12	Employers' liability	311
12.1	Introduction	312
12.2	An employer's personal non-delegable duty of care	313
12.2.1	Competent workforce	316
12.2.2	Adequate material and equipment	316
12.2.3	A proper system of working (including effective supervision)	318
12.2.4	A safe workplace	319
12.3	Breach of statutory duty	319
12.3.1	Does the statute give rise to a claim in tort law?	320
12.3.2	Has the duty been breached and does the harm fall within the scope of the duty?	325
12.4	Vicarious liability	326
12.4.1	Stage 1: an employer–employee relationship	330
12.4.2	Stage 2: a tortious act ...	333
12.4.3	... committed 'in the course of employment'	334
12.5	Conclusion	339
	End-of-chapter questions	339
	Further reading	340
<hr/>
13	Product liability	341
13.1	Introduction	342
13.2	Defective products—claims in negligence	343
13.2.1	The scope of liability under Donoghue	344
13.2.1.1	Duty of care	344

13.2.1.2	Breach and causation	346
13.2.2	The limits of negligence liability	347
13.3	Defective products—claims under Part 1 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987	350
13.3.1	Bringing a claim	350
13.3.2	What is a ‘defect’?	351
13.3.3	Causation and limitations	359
13.3.4	Defences	360
13.3.5	Overall effect of the Consumer Protection Act 1987	362
13.4	Part 1 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987—annotated	364
13.5	Claiming under Part 1 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987—at a glance	368
13.6	Conclusion	368
	End-of-chapter questions	369
	Further reading	370

PART III The personal torts

371

14 Trespass to the person

375

14.1	Introduction	376
14.2	Battery	379
14.2.1	Intentional application ...	380
14.2.2	... of unlawful touching	381
14.2.3	Direct and immediate force	382
14.2.4	Lawful justification or excuse	383
14.3	Assault	383
14.3.1	Intention	384
14.3.2	Reasonable apprehension ...	384
14.3.3	... of immediate and direct application of unlawful force	384
14.3.4	Lawful justification or excuse	387
14.4	False imprisonment	387
14.4.1	Intention	387
14.4.2	A complete restriction of the claimant’s freedom of movement ...	388
14.4.3	... without legal authorisation	392
14.5	Defences: lawful justification or excuse	394
14.5.1	Consent	395
14.5.2	Necessity	398
14.5.3	Self-defence	398

14.6	Intentional infliction of psychiatric or physical harm	399
14.6.1	The rule in Wilkinson v Downton	400
14.6.2	The Protection from Harassment Act 1997	402
14.7	Conclusion	405
	End-of-chapter questions	406
	Further reading	406
<hr/>
15	Defamation	408
15.1	Introduction	409
15.2	The torts of defamation: libel and slander	414
15.3	Judge and jury	415
15.4	Establishing a claim in defamation	416
15.4.1	Who can sue?	416
15.5	Is the statement defamatory?	418
15.5.1	Innuendo	421
15.6	Does the statement refer to the claimant?	423
15.6.1	References to a group or class	425
15.7	Has the statement been 'published'?	426
15.7.1	Distributors	427
15.7.2	Republication	428
15.8	Defences	429
15.8.1	Justification or truth	429
15.8.2	Privilege	431
15.8.2.1	Absolute privilege	432
15.8.2.2	Qualified privilege	433
15.8.3	Honest comment	439
15.8.3.1	An opinion not fact ...	439
15.8.3.2	... of public interest	443
15.8.3.3	... and honestly held	443
15.9	Offer of amends	444
15.10	Remedies: damages and injunctions	445
15.11	Conclusion	447
	End-of-chapter questions	447
	Further reading	448

16 Invasion of privacy	449
16.1 Introduction	450
16.2 A tort of invasion of privacy?	451
16.3 How has privacy been protected?	455
16.4 Breach of confidence	459
16.4.1 A 'reasonable expectation of privacy'	462
16.5 Towards a modern approach	465
16.5.1 The Human Rights Act 1998 and European case law	465
16.5.2 Balancing privacy and freedom of expression	468
16.6 Privacy claims today	470
16.6.1 Children and privacy	471
16.6.2 Iniquity	473
16.6.3 Limits to the current protection	476
16.7 Conclusion	478
End-of-chapter questions	478
Further reading	479
PART IV The land torts	481
17 Trespass to land and nuisance	483
17.1 Introduction	484
17.2 Trespass to land	485
17.2.1 Intention	486
17.2.2 Defences	488
17.2.3 Trespass ab initio	489
17.2.4 Remedies	490
17.3 Private nuisance	491
17.3.1 What is private nuisance?	492
17.3.2 Who can sue?	496
17.3.3 The concept of the 'reasonable user'	499
17.3.3.1 Factors that are always considered	500
17.3.3.2 A factor that is sometimes considered, dependent on the type of claim	501
17.3.3.3 Other factors that are sometimes considered, if relevant to the claim	504
17.3.4 Defences to nuisance	509
17.3.4.1 Statutory authority	509

17.3.4.2	Twenty years' prescription	511
17.4	Remedies and the human rights dimension	514
17.4.1	Injunctions and abatement	514
17.4.2	Damages	516
17.4.3	Under the Human Rights Act 1998	518
17.5	Public nuisance	523
17.6	Conclusion	525
	End-of-chapter questions	525
	Further reading	526
<hr/>
18	Actions under the rule of Rylands v Fletcher	527
18.1	Introduction	528
18.2	The rule in Rylands v Fletcher	529
18.2.1	'The defendant brings on his land for his own purposes something likely to do mischief ...'	531
18.2.2	'... if it escapes ...'	532
18.2.3	'... which represents a non-natural use of land ...'	533
18.3	Cambridge Water v Eastern Counties Leather plc	535
18.3.1	'... and which causes foreseeable damage of the relevant type'	536
18.4	Transco v Stockport MBC	539
18.5	Standing and defences	540
18.5.1	Who can sue?	540
18.5.2	Defences	541
18.6	The nuisance/ Rylands v Fletcher /negligence overlap	543
18.6.1	The 'measured duty of care'	545
18.7	Where does Rylands v Fletcher fit today?	546
18.8	Conclusion	547
	End-of-chapter questions	548
	Further reading	548
<hr/>
PART V Liability, damages, and limitations		551
<hr/>
19	Damages in tort	553
19.1	Introduction	554

19.2	What are damages for?	556
19.3	Calculating damages	561
19.3.1	Forms of damages payments	561
19.3.2	Special and general damages	564
19.3.3	Death and damages	565
19.4	Independent, joint and several concurrent liabilities	567
19.5	Time limitations on claims	569
19.6	The problem with damages	574
19.6.1	Alternative sources of compensation	579
19.6.1.1	'No-fault' liability and simple compensation schemes	581
19.6.1.2	First-party insurance	583
19.7	Debunking the compensation myth	585
19.8	Conclusion	587
	End-of-chapter questions	588
	Further reading	588
	APPENDIX: ANNOTATED PROBLEM QUESTIONS	591
	INDEX	609