

C O N T E N T S

	Introduction	vii
	Select Bibliography	xxiv
	Chronology	xxvi
	Translator's Analysis of 'The Republic'	xlv
	Editor's Note	lvii
	Translator's Note	lvii
Book I	327-31 Preliminary conversation with Cephalus: What is justice?	1
	331-6 Conversation with Polemarchus: Criticism of the idea that justice consists in giving every man his due.	4
	336-54 Conversation with Thrasymachus: Exposition and criticism of the view that justice is the advantage of the stronger.	11
II	357-68 The challenge of Glaucon and Adeimantus: Can Socrates show that justice benefits the just man? Gyges and the ring of invisibility.	33
	368-9 Socrates accepts the challenge: The origin of justice and injustice in society, where they are writ large.	43
	369-76 The growth of the city: The division of labour. The need for guardians who are lovers of wisdom.	44
	376-403 The education of the guardians: Music and gymnastic must be designed to mould the characters of the young. Censorship of literature and the arts.	52
III	403-12 The care of the body: Gymnastic and medicine.	81
	412-27 The choice of the best as the city's rulers:
IV	The myth of the metals. Community of property for the rulers will ensure the unity and happiness of the city.	91

THE REPUBLIC

	427-34 The cardinal virtues in the city: Wisdom, courage, temperance and justice.	106
	434-49 The virtues in the individual soul. The
V	three parts of the soul.	114
	449-57 Equality of the sexes.	129
	457-66 Community of women and children for the guardians.	138
	466-71 War and military training.	148
	471-504 Philosopher-kings: The moral and intellectual qualifications of the ideal rulers.. . . .	154
VI	504-6 The form of the good is the object of the philosopher's knowledge.	186
	506-21 The nature of the good explained by three analogies: The sun, the line and the cave.	189
VII	521-31 The education of the philosophers: Mathematics.	203
	531-41 Dialectic: The coping-stone of knowledge and education.	215
VIII	543-5 The decline of the city and of the individual soul.	226
	545-50 First stage: Timocracy and the timocratic man.	227
	550-5 Second stage: Oligarchy and the oligarchic man.	232
	555-62 Third stage: Democracy and the democratic man.	238
IX	562-76 Fourth stage: Tyranny and the tyrannical man.	246
	576-92 Comparison of the just and unjust lives: The life of the just man is happier and more profitable than the life of the unjust man.	261
X	595-602 The ancient quarrel between philosophy and the arts: Art deals in illusions.	282
	602-8 It appeals only to the senses and the passions, and corrupts the character.	290
	608-12 The immortality of the soul.	298
	612-14 The rewards of justice in this world.	301
	614-21 The myth of Er: The rewards of justice after death.	303
Notes	311