

Contents

List of abbreviations	viii
List of tables and maps	x
Preface	xi

Chapter one The Enigmatic Tsar, his Friends, and his Inheritance	1
Were Russia's rulers their own worst enemies?	1
The character of Alexander I	3
Alexander and Paul (1796–9)	4
The coup of 1801	8
Foreign enemies and domestic minorities	10
Russian backwardness	13
The reforms of 1801–4	19
Conclusion	25

Chapter two Russia and the Napoleonic Wars.....	29
Introduction	29
The descent into war (1801–5)	34
The War of the Third Coalition (1805–7)	40
Alliance with France (1807–12)	46
Defeating Napoleon (1812–14)	51
The Congress of Vienna	54

Chapter three Constitutions, Congresses and Classes under Alexander I.....	59
The Napoleonic Wars and Russian constitutionalism	59
The Plans of Mikhail Speranskii	62
Speranskii's downfall	67
Alexander and the Kingdom of Poland	70
The abandonment of reform	72
Post-war diplomacy	76
The problem of demobilization	79
Serfs, bureaucrats and merchants	81

Chapter four The Decembrist Movement	87
The succession crisis of 1825	87
The roots of revolt: bureaucrats, writers, academics, masons, and soldiers	89
First attempts at organization	98
The schism of 1821	103
Pestel' and the Southern Society	106
Decembrists in the north	108
The abortive rising	110
Conclusion	111
 Chapter five The Administrative and Social Policy of Nicholas I.....	116
Nicholas I as conservative	116
Nicholas I as reformer	119
The governmental machine	122
The bureaucracy	125
Reforming the law	128
State peasants	130
Serfs	133
Conclusion	143
 Chapter six The Emergence of the Russian Intelligentsia.....	148
Introduction	148
Discontented nobles	149
Commoners	151
Outlets for opinion	154
The political implications of literary expression	159
Slavophiles	163
Westernizers	165
Conclusion	167
 Chapter seven The Russian Bear.....	173
War with the Ottoman Empire and Persia	173
Nicholas I and the Polish problem	176
Ukrainians and Jews	179
The Caucasus, central Asia, Siberia, Finns and Balts	182
The Turkish problem in the 1830s and 1840s	187
Russia and the European revolutions of 1848	190
The Crimean War and the death of the tsar	196

CONTENTS

Chapter eight The Politics of Emancipation.....	204
The accession of Alexander II and the end of hostilities	204
Domestic unrest	208
Alexander's caution	214
The contradictory signals of 1855 and 1856	216
The decision of 1857 to grant the serfs their freedom	222
The decision of 1858 to free the serfs with land	226
Getting principles on to the statute book	230
Chapter nine In the Wake of Emancipation	239
Responses to the legislation of 1861	239
Military and fiscal reform	245
The church	249
Higher education	250
Local government	253
Primary schools	257
Courts	258
The press	261
The weaknesses and strengths of the reforms of the 1860s	263
Chapter ten Russia and Europe	278
Russian foreign policy in the post-Crimean era	278
Courting France (1856–63)	284
The consequences of the Polish rebellion (1863–70)	289
Attempting to profit from the Franco-Prussian War (1870–5)	298
Victory and defeat in the Balkans (1875–8)	302
Chapter eleven Populism	311
Trials and terrorists	311
Populists and social change	312
Populists, education and the role of ideas	317
Karakozov and Nechaev	321
The Chaikovtsy and the going to the people	325
The rise and fall of Land and Liberty	329
The People's Will	336
Conclusion	338
Bibliography	344
Romanov family tree	366
Maps	367
Index	371