

Introduction	9
I. Origins of Ceramic Technology as a Long Term Process of Innovation	13
I-1 Economic Model	13
I-2 Geographical and Cultural Division of the USA Southwest	16
I-3 Earliest Ware in the USA Southwest	18
I-4 Social Model	19
I-5 American Coasts and Inlands	21
I-6 Late Diffusionism and Postpleistocene Adaptations	23
I-7 Technological Model Revisited	24
I-8 Late Paleolithic Fired Clay	26
I-9 Pre-Pottery Containers in the Eastern Mediterranean	28
I-10 Lime Plaster, White Ware, and the Earliest Pottery in Pre-Pottery Neolithic B	30
I-11 The Southwestern Japan Coats	33
I-12 African Inland Around Paleochar Lake	34
I-13 West Mediterranean Coasts	35
I-14 The Danube-Elbe-Rhine European Inlands in Central Europe and Pottery	39
I-15 Synthesis of the Developmental Model	41
II. Adaptive Role of Pottery Forms in the Context of Environment and Subsistence	47
II-1 Coastal Environment in the Time of the Earliest Pottery and Pottery Forms [A. Pottery and Environment; B. Shell middens; C. Changing Sea Levels; D. Coastal and Submerged Sites; E. Initial Forms of Pottery.]	47
II-2 Inland Desert Environments and the Earliest Pottery Forms [A. Climate of the Southern Sahara (10,000-8000 b.p.); B. Earliest Ceramic Forms in the Southern Sahara; C. Climate of the US Southwest in the Late Archaic Period (3000 b.p.); D. Earliest Firing of Clay Artifacts in the US Southwest; E. Beginnings of Pottery in the Mogollon and Hohokam Areas; F. Beginnings of Pottery in the Patayan Area.]	55
II-3 Inland Mixed Forest Environment and the Earliest Pottery Forms [A. Climate and Vegetation in Neolithic Temperate Europe (10,000-5000 b.p.); B. Earliest Pottery in Central Europe; C. East European Boundaries of the Linear Pottery Culture and Experiments with the Earliest Ceramics; D. Earliest Pottery from Woodland Period in the US Northeast.]	64
II-4 Mutual Relations Among Incipient Pottery Shapes, Natural Environment, and Subsistence	72
III. Correlates of Ceramic Morphology and Cultural Behavior	74
III-1 Shapes and Sizes of Pots	74
III-2 Volume of Pots	78
III-3 Rim Diameter of Pots	80

III-4	Wall Thickness of Pots	81
III-5	Bottom and Neck Forms of Pots	83
III-6	Other Functional Attributes of Pots	85
III-7	Life Time of Pots	85
III-8	Life Cycles of Pots	86
	[A. Production, Its Attributes and Stages; B. Economy of Production; C. Organization of Production; D. Use and Reuse of Pottery; E. Discarding of Pots and Ceramic Waste.]
IV.	Informative Value of Ceramic Decoration	95
IV-1	Introduction	95
IV-2	Pottery Decoration	97
	[A. DECORATED POT: 1. Pot as a Medium of Decoration; 2. Kinds of Decorated Pottery; 3. Decorative Techniques; 4. Decorative Attributes; 5. Individuality of Decoration; 6. Stochastic Variability. B. INTERPRETATION OF DECORATION: 7. Encoding of Concrete Meanings; 8. Decoding of Records; 9. The Iconic Meaning of the Decoration as a Sign; 10. Iconographic Style. C. COGNITIVE DECORATION: 11. The Motor-habit Theory of Decoration; 12. Abstraction and Stylization of Decorative Units; 13. Rules of Decoration Performance; 14. Learning of Decoration; 15. "Why Pots are Decorated".]
IV-3	Pottery Design	112
	[A. POT DESIGN: 1. Definition of Design; 2. Designed Pot; 3. Techniques of Design; 4. Attributes of Design; 5. Choice of Design Attributes; 6. Variability of Design. B. INTERPRETATION OF DESIGN: 7. Passive Encoding of Representative Patterns; 8. Decoding of Signs; 9. Index Meaning of the Design as a Sign; 10. Assertive Style. C. COGNITIVE DESIGN: 11. Theory of Social Interaction; 12. Hierarchy and Composition of Designed Motifs; 13. Rules of Design Performance; 14. Transfer of Designs through the Interactions; 15. "Ceramic Sociology".]
IV-4	Style of Pottery	120
	[A. DECORATIVE STYLE: 1. Definition; 2. Stylistic Unity of Pots; 3. Techniques of Style; 4. Style Attributes; 5. Satisfaction with Style; 6. Symbolic Variability. B. INTERPRETATION OF STYLE: 7. Active Encoding of the Communicative Meaning; 8. Decoding of Metaphors; 9. Style as a Discriminating Symbol; 10. Emblematic Style. C. COGNITIVE STYLE: 11. Theory of Information Exchange; 12. Structure and Symmetry of Stylistic Attributes; 13. Rules of Style Performance; 14. Transfer of Style by Communication; 15. "Hidden Dimensions of Ceramics".]
IV-5	Evolutionary Theory of Decorated Pottery	128
	Conclusions	131
	References	133
	České shrnutí	149
	Sources of figures and permission granted	170
	Index	172