

Contents

Foreword	vii
Introduction	xi
Marlene Laruelle
1 Dangerous Liaisons: Eurasianism, the European Far Right, and Putin's Russia	1
Marlene Laruelle
Part I: Alexander Dugin's Trajectory: Mediating European Far Right to Russia	33
2 Alexander Dugin and the West European New Right, 1989–1994	35
Anton Shekhovtsov
3 Moscow State University's Department of Sociology and the Climate of Opinion in Post-Soviet Russia	55
Vadim Rossman
Part II: France, Italy, and Spain: Dugin's European Cradles	77
4 A Long-Lasting Friendship: Alexander Dugin and the French Radical Right	79
Jean-Yves Camus
5 From Evola to Dugin: The Neo-Eurasianist Connection in Italy	97
Giovanni Savino
6 Arriba Eurasia?: The Difficult Establishment of Neo-Eurasianism in Spain	125
Nicolas Lebourg

Part III: Turkey, Hungary, and Greece: Dugin's New Conquests	143
7 "Failed Exodus": Dugin's Networks in Turkey Vügar İmanbeyli	145
8 Deciphering Eurasianism in Hungary: Narratives, Networks, and Lifestyles Umut Korkut and Emel Akçali	175
9 The Dawning of Europe and Eurasia?: The Greek Golden Dawn and Its Transnational Links Sofia Tipaldou	193
Part IV: Conclusion: The European Far Right at Moscow's Service?	221
10 Far-Right Election Observation Monitors in the Service of the Kremlin's Foreign Policy Anton Shekhovtsov	223
References	245
Index	259
About the Contributors	273