

Bloomberg Businessweek

August 29 — September 4, 2016

Cover Trail

How the cover gets made

Opening Remarks How blockchain could end corporations (what is blockchain, anyway?)	8
Bloomberg View Rethinking the $1-a-share money-market fiction • A slower, saner Brexit	12
Movers ▲ Weekly pay for the bottom quartile ▼ Ryan Lochte loses his Speedo	15
Global Economics
TPP's demise may be China's triumph	16
Russia passes a draconian, impractical cybersecurity law to squelch terror—and dissent	17
An odd shortage in Japan, the fastest-graying nation: Nursery school teachers	18
The world is thirsty for U.S. crude	19
Companies/Industries
Millennials have dropped the Olympic torch. Will NBC have to drop its ad rates?	20
Chinese airlines offer foreign pilots soaring salaries	21
Snap Kitchen serves up ready-made artisanal meals to fast foodies	22
Breakdown: Canada's Couche-Tard tries to surround 7-Eleven with Circle Ks	23
Politics/Policy
Clinton has Georgia on her mind	24
The open-and-shut case against private prisons is a bit ajar	25
Wind and solar farms on public land get help from Obama, but not the kind developers want	26
Technology
China's sharing economy is more and more selfish	29
Amazon pays itself royalties in Europe and avoids taxes at home	30
Siri cares—really, she does—she just can't hear you	31
The old chip in your smartphone may be heading to Mars	32
Innovation: With flexible robot surgeons, it's so long, scar stories	33
Markets/Finance
One $5 million bonus in the hand is worth $10 million in the bush	34
How much do public pensions love private equity? It's a secret	35
The software providers taking advantage of Ponzi schemes taking advantage of day traders	36
Defined: Oatmeal should be "lumpy." Earnings, not so much	37
Focus On/Small Business
Street food in a derelict warehouse—that's what Londoners call a night out	39
The Bull Moose hit-predicting algorithm, brought to you by two guys in a shack in Maine	40
Startups get all the love, but scale-ups do all the work	41
Small to Big: The "wow" moment for Yasso frozen Greek yogurt came when Tom Brady crashed the website	42
Features
Eye in the Sky Can airplanes solve street crime? Baltimore is finding out	50
Vin de Scam Bamboozling Bordeaux lovers in Berkeley	58
The Things They Buried Historians and grandchildren race against Nazi-grave profiteers	62
Etc.
Has North Dakota State's championship football team had too much of a good thing?	69
Travel: Five fab places to float away	72
The Critic: Cathy O'Neil's quest to defuse Weapons of Math Destruction	74
Food: Jersey Mike's wants you to eat a more sophisticated sub	76
Horoscope: You may want to hold off on that product launch until October	78
What I Wear to Work: Personal stylist Skyler McCurine's aesthetic is "just enough too much"	79
How Did I Get Here? Marne Levine, Instagram's COO, has come a long way since her days as the Trash Queen	80

Domestic Cover

1

"The cover is on a company that's been hired to do aerial surveillance over Baltimore."

"Why?"

"To help solve crimes."

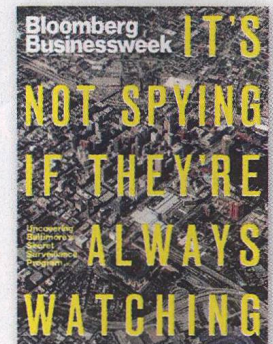

"That seems great. Is there a particular crime it's been hired to work on?"

"Well, the surveillance goes for hours on end, and it's all over the city, so the idea is that it would be for all crime."

"Oh. And everyone's OK with this?"

"The public hasn't been told."

"You enjoy upsetting me way too much."

International Cover

1

"The cover is on blockchain."

"I have absolutely no idea what that means."

