

Contents

Preface xi

A note on translations xiv

1 Introduction: theology and truth 1

Truth as a theological problem 1

Definitions 6

2 The triune God as the center of Christian belief 17

The concept of Christian belief 17

The liturgical centrality of the Trinity 24

Communal centrality and epistemic primacy 44

3 Epistemic justification in modern theology 50

Three theses on justification: a case study 51

Variations 62

4 Problems about justification 72

The belief-dependence of inner experience 72

Only beliefs justify beliefs 80

The truth-dependence of meaning and interpretation 90

5 The epistemic primacy of belief in the Trinity 108

Jesus' universal primacy 108

Epistemic right as christological coherence 115

Epistemic priorities, truth commitments, and plausible interpretation 126

6 Epistemic priorities and alien claims 141

- Fideism and epistemic priorities 141
- Inclusion and assimilation 147
- The epistemic force of inclusive power 153
- The limits of epistemic judgment 159
- A test case: religious diversity 169

7 The epistemic role of the Spirit 180

- The pragmatic thesis 182
- The epistemic limits of virtue 185
- Practice and meaning 191
- Love and belief 204
- Can we control what we believe? 212

8 The concept of truth 217

- Realism in search of a truth bearer 217
- Different ways of rejecting realism 223
- Truth without realism or anti-realism 233

9 Trinity, truth, and belief 242

- Truth under theological discipline 242
- The trinitarian shape of the concept of truth 259
- Trinity, justified belief, and truth 275

Index 283