

CONTENTS

Introduction	13
Objective of the study	15
Organization of the chapters.....	15
Description of the data	16
A brief description of the types and structure of words in Japanese	18
The Japanese system of writing.....	19
The character-sound relationship.....	20
The character-meaning relationship	22
 1 Specifics of Japanese given names and naming practices..	24
1.1 The beginning of the modern Japanese name system	24
1.2 Personal names and their ability to distinguish between individuals.....	26
1.3 Formal limitations to given names and registration of birth	28
1.4 The reading of kanji in names	29
1.5 The people involved in the name selection and external influences.....	30
1.6 Name selection criteria and methods.....	33
1.6.1 Name selection based on the meaning of the kanji or the preference for a particular kanji	34
1.6.2 An emphasis on the sound and the overall image of the name	35
1.6.3 Counting the strokes	37
1.6.4 Sharing common features in names within the family	40
1.6.5 The influence of important events and famous people and characters.....	43

2	Transitions in Japanese given names	46
2.1	Orthographic transitions and the development of the number of characters permitted for use in names	46
2.2	Transitions in the name structural patterns	49
2.2.1	Male name patterns	50
2.2.2	Female name patterns	54
2.2.3	The emergence of new names.....	59
2.3	Reflection of the historical period in the meanings of given names	62
2.3.1	The Meiji period (1868–1912).....	62
2.3.2	The Taishō period (1912–1926)	66
2.3.3	The Shōwa period prior to the end of World War II (1926–1945)	68
2.3.4	The Shōwa period after World War II (1945–1989)	70
2.3.5	The Heisei period (from 1989).....	73
3	Characteristics of currently bestowed Japanese names.....	75
3.1	The graphic form.....	75
3.2	The phonological form	80
3.3	Ateji -type names and the growing discordance in the character-sound relationship.....	85
3.3.1	Partial discordance between the phonological form of the name and the readings of the characters used	87
3.3.2	Utilizing the kun readings of characters corresponding to verbal or adjectival roots	89
3.3.3	Utilizing the “ renjō ” reading.....	90
3.3.4	Utilizing the jukujikun reading	91
3.3.5	Readings based on foreign-language equivalents	92
3.3.6	“Silent” characters in names	93
3.3.7	The assignment of a graphic form to the phonological form of a name on the basis of a semantic relationship....	95
3.3.8	Reading names with nonstandard character-sound relationships.....	97

4	Most frequent kanji used in current given names and their interpretation.....	101
4.1	Qualities, feelings and emotions	108
4.1.1	Kanji used in male names	108
4.1.2	Kanji used in female names	114
4.1.3	Kanji used in both male and female names.....	117
4.2	Kanji related to the natural world	122
4.2.1	Plants and their parts.....	122
4.2.2	Animals and the zodiac.....	134
4.2.3	Gemstones.....	138
4.2.4	The sky and heavenly bodies	139
4.2.5	The landscape	143
4.2.6	The weather and seasons of the year	145
4.3	Other groups and individual characters.....	147
4.3.1	Light, radiance.....	147
4.3.2	Sound.....	148
4.3.3	Colors	148
4.3.4	Numbers.....	150
4.3.5	Cloth	151
4.3.6	Flying and sailing.....	153
4.3.7	Human activity.....	154
4.3.8	Other kanji	159
5	Human qualities, parents' aspirations and other priorities reflected in currently bestowed names.....	164
5.1	Desired qualities.....	164
5.2	Hopes and aspirations for the future	166
5.3	Human relationships.....	167
5.4	Reflection of the season of the child's birth	168
5.5	Commemoration of important personal events	169
5.6	Reflection of the 2011 Tōhoku earthquake and tsunami.....	169
6	Summary of important aspects of currently bestowed Japanese names	173

Conclusion..... 177

References 179

Appendix 1:
Top ten ranking male and female names by Meiji Yasuda..... 186

Appendix 2:
Names from the corpus containing one or more of the most frequent kanji discussed in Chapter Four 196

Appendix 3:
Alphabetical lists of phonological forms of names
in the corpus..... 228