

How the cover gets made

|   |    |
|---|----|
| Opening Remarks How uncertain will Trump's economic policy be? No one's certain                                      | 6  |
| Perspectives China's Li Keqiang praises "reform, openness, and free trade"   | 8  |
| Bloomberg View I (cough) ♥ (wheeze) London • Tom Price gets ethical, late in the game                                | 9  |
| Movers ▲ And Best Picture goes to... Amazon? ▼ The risks of leaving the TPP  | 11 |
| Global Economics   |    |
| Defense contractors love the new put-up-or-shut-up standard for NATO  | 12 |
| To the Kremlin, Putin and Trump don't look like BFFs anymore  | 13 |
| Oil is on the rebound, but the size of the industry's workforce is another story  | 14 |
| In the Year of the Rooster, China's luxury market is crowing again  | 15 |
| Companies/Industries   |    |
| Those bound things with paper and ink are actually selling pretty well—ask Bertelsmann                                      | 17 |
| It's stimulating! It's relaxing! It's weed!   | 18 |
| The Trumpchi starts rolling toward U.S. shores, with Chinese carmakers' hopes in tow  | 19 |
| Prince is gone, but his estate aims to boost his riches   | 21 |
| Politics/Policy  |    |
| Trump vowed the GOP could replace Obamacare quickly. Good luck with that  | 22 |
| Louisiana officials craft a climate change policy as the ground washes away beneath their feet                              | 23 |
| Efforts to revise NAFTA could put a big dent in U.S. carmaker jobs  | 25 |
| Technology   |    |
| Snapchat tries to keep the public out of its initial public offering  | 27 |
| Apple joins the long line of antitrust litigants suing Qualcomm   | 28 |
| Jeplan wants to turn old clothes into fuel. Hey, it worked in Back to the Future                                     | 29 |
| While promising to hire domestically, IBM moves jobs offshore   | 30 |
| Innovation: What Wi-Fi can do, Li-Fi may soon do better   | 31 |
| Markets/Finance  |    |
| Navient's student loan advice may have left borrowers confused—and poorer   | 33 |
| "Nearshored" to Jacksonville, Wall Streeters dream of ordering Indian at midnight   | 34 |
| Money managers' climate positions are all over the map  | 35 |
| Forged seals. Bogus letters. Phony documents. Welcome to China's bond market  | 36 |
| The Arctic may open up for drilling. But with $55-a-barrel oil, what's the point?  | 36 |
| Features   |    |
| Rich Man, Cabinet Man? Wilbur Ross embodies Trump's plutocrat-into-bureaucrat model                                  | 38 |
| Twin Peeks Brad Stone's The Upstarts lifts the veil on Uber's and Airbnb's strategic smarts                   | 44 |
| Etc.   |    |
| Jacobe Chrisman's Wonder Forge keeps board games from being bored games   | 55 |
| Design: Replace your sad office supplies with classier brass alternatives  | 58 |
| Real Estate: Should you move from San Francisco to South Lake Tahoe?   | 59 |
| Health: Sit and sweat in an infrared sauna—just like celebrities!  | 60 |
| The Critic: The government couldn't get Steve Cohen. Black Edge tells why                                     | 62 |
| What I Wear to Work: Interior designer Lisa Turner's wardrobe is dog-friendly  | 63 |
| How Did I Get Here? Glassdoor CEO Robert Hohman spent a year playing World of Warcraft full time. For his job | 64 |

Domestic Cover

1
"We profile Trump's pick for commerce secretary, Wilbur Ross, and what it could mean for the administration."

"Probably great things, right?"

"You should read the story."

"I did. But I don't really trust the media. I'm just going to settle on it's going to mean great things."

International Cover

1
"We have an exclusive excerpt from a forthcoming book about how Airbnb and Uber came to dominate the sharing economy and made billions of dollars as a result."

"This makes me feel bad about abandoning my billion-dollar app idea."

"What was it?"

"You open it, and it hacks into banks around the world, taking fractions of cents from each over an extended period, until you get to a billion dollars."

