

"A fine collection documenting the twists and turns of the debates on postmodernism in geography and urban studies. False god or saviour? You will find both views here. You will also find many fascinating intellectual moments – and not a little controversy."

Professor Nigel Thrift, University of Bristol

"This impressive anthology brings together the warring factions of American geographical theory – Marxism versus Postmodernism. Key figures of the Italian geographical tradition contribute a bold initiative to move geographical debates into line with current scientific standards. Their work, rarely available in English, is a 'must read' for those concerned with the representation of global flows and with cartographic practice."

Professor Rob Shields, Carleton University

Postmodern Geography: Theory and Praxis focuses upon one of the key themes that have served to shape disciplinary debates in geography over the past decade: the role of postmodernity and postmodern interpretations in reconfiguring our ways of framing social enquiry and our readings of space.

This edited collection presents numerous perspectives on the implications of the postmodern turn for the praxis of geography. The contributors engage in debate about the epistemological bases of possible new geographical praxes – "other" possible ways of "doing geography" – while also querying the implications of postmodern approaches for geography and geographers' political role.

The Contributors

Denis Cosgrove, Michael J. Dear, Giuseppe Dematteis, Franco Farinelli, Steven Flusty, Vincenzo Guarrasi, Cindi Katz, Luciana L. Martins, Claudio Minca, Don Mitchell, Gunnar Olsson, Neil Smith, and Edward W. Soja.

The Editor

Claudio Minca is Associate Professor in Political and Economic Geography at the University of Venice and teaches an annual course on Postmodern Cities and Spaces at Venice International University. He has written widely on geographical representations and the postmodern turn in geography and is the author of Spazi effimeri (1996) and the editor of Introduzione alla geografia postmoderna (2001).

Cover illustration: photograph by Claudio Minca

Cover design by: Baseline Arts Ltd

Printed in Great Britain

Visit our website at

<http://www.blackwellpublishers.co.uk>

ISBN 0-631-22560-9

9 0000

9 780631 225607

 BLACKWELL
Publishers

Contents

List of Figures	vii
List of Contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
Prelude Claudio Minca	xiv
1 The Postmodern Turn Michael Dear	1
Cities . . .
2 Exploring the Postmetropolis Edward W. Soja	37
3 Postmodern Geographical Praxis? The Postmodern Impulse and the War against Homeless People in the 'Post-justice' City Don Mitchell	57
4 Hiding the Target: Social Reproduction in the Privatized Urban Environment Cindi Katz	93
Scales . . .
5 Shifting Cities Giuseppe Dematteis	113
6 Adventures of a Barong: A Worm's-eye View of Global Formation Steven Flusty	129

7 Rescaling Politics: Geography, Globalism, and the New Urbanism Neil Smith	147
Mappings . . .
8 Millennial Geographics Denis Cosgrove and Luciana L. Martins	169
9 Postmodern Temptations Claudio Minca	196
10 Paradoxes of Modern and Postmodern Geography: Heterotopia of Landscape and Cartographic Logic Vincenzo Guarrasi	226
11 Mapping the Global, or the Metaquantum Economics of Myth Franco Farinelli	238
12 Washed in a Washing Machine™ Gunnar Olsson	255
Afterword Edward W. Soja	282
Index	295