

Contents

- Preface v
- 1 The social and applied psychology of music 1
  - 2 Composition and musicianship 13
    - 2.1 Creativity 14
      - 2.1.1 The concept of creativity 14
      - 2.1.2 The creative process 15
      - 2.1.3 Theories of creativity 17
    - 2.2 Composition, eminence, and fashion 23
      - 2.2.1 Biographical influences on composition and eminence 25
      - 2.2.2 The clockwork muse 32
      - 2.2.3 Melodic originality and eminence 37
      - 2.2.4 Collaboration 40
    - 2.3 Musicianship 42
      - 2.3.1 Personality and identity 42
      - 2.3.2 Environment, motivation, and musical skill 51
      - 2.3.3 Performance 60
      - 2.3.4 The 'Mozart effect' 70
  - 3 Musical preference and taste 75
    - 3.1 The music 75
      - 3.1.1 Experimental aesthetics 76
      - 3.1.2 Subjective complexity and repetition 81
      - 3.1.3 Preference for prototypes 84
    - 3.2 The listening situation 89
      - 3.2.1 Konečni's arousal-based approach 89
      - 3.2.2 Appropriateness, typicality, and arousal-based goals 93
      - 3.2.3 Compliance and prestige 97
    - 3.3 The listener 101
      - 3.3.1 Social class, taste publics, and massification 102
      - 3.3.2 Age 106
      - 3.3.3 Sex 113
      - 3.3.4 Personality 115
      - 3.3.5 Musical training and ability 122

- 3.4 The reciprocal response model 123
- 3.5 Emotional responses to music 126
  - 3.5.1 The circumplex model 128
  - 3.5.2 Intrinsic and extrinsic meaning 132
  - 3.5.3 Strong experiences of music 136
- 3.6 Music in everyday life 138
- 4 'Problem music' and subcultures 143
  - 4.1 Campaigns and protests: the filth and the fury 144
    - 4.1.1 Media effects and adolescent stereotyping 151
  - 4.2 Prevalence and content of pop music media 153
    - 4.2.1 Prevalence of pop music 154
    - 4.2.2 Content of pop music 156
  - 4.3 Effects of problem music on thoughts and behaviours 165
    - 4.3.1 Delinquency and criminality 166
    - 4.3.2 Illegal drugs 174
    - 4.3.3 Permissive sexual attitudes 183
    - 4.3.4 Sexual and racial discrimination 186
    - 4.3.5 Self-harm and suicide 193
    - 4.3.6 (Mis)Interpretation of lyrics 200
  - 4.4 Is there a case for censorship? 205
    - 4.4.1 Biases in the evaluation of problem music 205
    - 4.4.2 Summary and implications for censorship 211
  - 4.5 Musical subcultures 217
    - 4.5.1 Music as a 'badge' 218
    - 4.5.2 The uses and gratifications approach 225
    - 4.5.3 Idolisation of musicians 229
- 5 Music, business, and health 237
  - 5.1 The music industry 238
    - 5.1.1 Tin Pan Alley and music industry innovation 238
    - 5.1.2 Superstardom 242
    - 5.1.3 Music purchasing 244
    - 5.1.4 Music piracy 250
    - 5.1.5 Radio programming 254
  - 5.2 Music and advertising 256
    - 5.2.1 Classical conditioning 257
    - 5.2.2 Elaboration likelihood, involvement, and musical fit 258
    - 5.2.3 Sonic branding, jingles, and sponsorship 264

5.3	Music in commercial environments	267
5.3.1	Pleasure and arousal-based effects	270
5.3.2	Knowledge activation effects	278
5.3.3	Time perception and waiting	283
5.3.4	Workplace morale and productivity	292
5.4	Music and health	297
5.4.1	Models of music therapy	298
5.4.2	Music and physical health	301
6	Musical development and education	313
6.1	Musical development	315
6.1.1	The socio-cultural perspective	315
6.1.2	Biological predispositions and the social context	326
6.1.3	Does musical and artistic development proceed in stages?	327
6.1.4	Is musical development domain-specific?	330
6.1.5	Normative and expert development in music	332
6.1.6	Theoretical models of musical development	333
6.2	Music education	338
6.2.1	Contexts of music education	339
6.2.2	Aims and objectives	345
6.2.3	Learning and teaching	349
6.3	Conclusion	355
7	Concluding remarks	357
	References	361
	Name Index	445
	Subject Index	467