Chapter 8 Au Contraire, Mon Frère: Criticisms of Our Work— Our Responses	245
Conflicts of Interest and Policies	245
Taxes and Other Supply-Side Policy Variables Don't Affect Population and Gross State Product Growth	247
Growth Is a Move from North to South, from Clouds to Sunshine, from Cold to Warm	251
Growth Is Predominantly a Matter of Education and Not Taxes and Other Economic Policy Measures	252
Personal Income per Capita and Median Income Growth as Measures of Success Show Taxes Don't Matter	253
Tax Rate Cuts Are Public Service Cuts	257
Other Factors Affect Population Growth (Oil, Sunshine, Accessible Suburbs, Etc.), and Therefore Taxes, Right-to-Work Laws, and Other Supply-Side Variables Don't	259
Correlations between Tax Rates and Growth Reflect a Simultaneous Equation Bias (Reverse Causation); That Is, Growth Causes Tax Cuts, Not the Reverse	261
There Are High-Tax States That Outperform Low-Tax States; Therefore the Supply-Side Theory Is Wrong	264
The Oklahoma Argument against Tax Cuts	267

Income Distribution Becomes More Even with Progressive High-Rate Tax Codes	270
The Probity of the ALEC-Laffer Measures Is Nonexistent; Therefore Their Policy Prescriptions Are Wrong	273
Federal Tax Rates Are More Important Than State Tax Rates, and Therefore State Tax Rates Don't Matter	275
The Wealthy Used Public Resources, and They—Not Others—Should Pay for Those Public Resources; We Need More Progressive Taxes, Not Less	276
When Is Enough Evidence Enough? If the Facts Were Reversed, We Would Concede	277
