

Bloomberg Businessweek

May 1 — May 7, 2017

Cover Trail

How the cover gets made

Opening Remarks Venezuela once had clout. Now it barely has friends	10
Bloomberg View The politics of “No!” hobbles growth • What the opioid crisis needs now	12
Movers ▲ A homecoming for Christian Dior ▼ A lumber tariff pounds building stocks	15
Global Economics
The Trump Bump’s more than just the stock market—and it’s wobbly	16
A new Korean war would also devastate the electronics supply chain	17
In need of a recovery, a Texas county courts the detention business	18
Africa’s commercial farmers may be the continent’s best bulwark against famine	20
Companies/Industries
Apple goes Hollywood	22
At Rockwell Automation, sensible sensitivity	24
“Adapt or die,” BMW tells its workers	25
Politics/Policy
The education of Emmanuel Macron	27
Medvedev isn’t feeling Putin’s love	28
Who decides when a national monument isn’t one anymore?	29
Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac have repaid taxpayers $266 billion. Now investors want their share	30
Technology
The coming Chinese robot revolution	32
Next-generation iPhone users may owe their cool OLED screens to a Japanese oil refiner	34
Innovation: Mass-producing bones, cartilage, and organs with 3D printing	35
Markets/Finance
“Free the banks!” becomes a global cry	37
Family offices master the art of managing art	38
BlackRock finds it pays to cut (some) ETF fees	39
Influential investors fret about growing signs of an overheated market	41
Focus On/Breakaways
There’s plenty for a midsize company to love in the White House tax plan	42
Optimistic about the new presidency, smaller businesses rush to sell stock	43
Features
Debrief: Justin Trudeau On Donald Trump, Nafta, housing bubbles, and marijuana	46
Staying Power Hard work, luck, and loyalty pay off for Fox’s new cable king, Sean Hannity	54
Sharing With Sheryl For the Facebook COO, work is personal	60
Etc.
Why jump out of a plane when you can sky-dive indoors with IFly?	67
Health: Schleppling to the smoothie shop is for suckers	70
Food: With the Rogue Experience, Wolfgang Puck re-reinvents himself	71
Design: High-tech accessories that look more like objets d’art	72
The Critic: American Kingpin traces the rise and fall of Silk Road’s founder	74
What I Wear to Work: Homepolish’s Noa Santos can’t let any clothing overshadow his design advice	75
How Did I Get Here? Christiane Amanpour has had a lot of people hang up on her	76

1

“Our cover interview is with Justin Trudeau. We talk about a range of important topics, such as—”

“Hold on, hold on—the Justin Trudeau? One of the most handsome world leaders of all time?”

“That’s really not relevant at all, and innapprop—”

“I’m sorry, I need to pause for a second. I’m feeling a little short of breath. Someone get me a cold towel! And for God’s sake, let’s get a photographer to Toronto ASAP! And make sure he has extra memory cards!”

