

Contents

1. Introduction	1
1.1 Definitions	1
1.2 Background	2
1.3 Terms of reference	3
2. Target groups, scope and elements of home-based long-term care	6
2.1 Target groups	6
2.2 Types and sources of long-term care	8
2.3 Elements of home-based long-term care	8
2.4 Care and dependence as elements of human development	9
2.5 Questions to be considered	10
3. Home-based long-term care in health and social systems	11
3.1 National-level responsibilities	12
3.2 District-level responsibilities	13
3.3 Community-level responsibilities	14
3.4 Integration of services	14
3.4.1 Integrating long-term care into the health services	15
3.4.2 Integration of home-based long-term care across different etiologies of functional dependence and across age groups	16
3.5 Adaptation of home-based long-term care policies to countries at different levels of economic development	17
3.6 Quality assurance	20
3.7 Selected strategies for home-based long-term care	20
3.8 Questions to be considered	21
4. Financing of long-term care	23
4.1 Financing mechanisms	23
4.2 Eligibility for long-term care services	24
4.3 Legislation on home-based and institutional long-term care insurance	24
4.4 Cost containment and priority-setting in long-term care	25
4.5 Trade-offs	26
4.6 Questions to be considered	26
5. Material resources	26
5.1 Supplies and equipment	27
5.2 Questions to be considered	27
6. Human resources	28
6.1 Informal human resources	28
6.2 Gender roles in the provision of care	28
6.3 Caregiving over the life course	29
6.4 Formal human resources	30
6.5 Questions to be considered	31

7. Conclusions	32
7.1 Lessons from the experience of developed and developing countries	32
7.2 Priority steps for developing long-term care	33
8. Recommendations	34
Acknowledgements	35
References	36
Annex 1
Definition of integrated health services	37
Annex 2
Integrating home-based long-term care into the health and social system	39
Annex 3
Availability of material resources for home-based long-term care in countries at different stages of economic development	42