

Bloomberg Businessweek

June 12 — June 18, 2017

Cover Trail

How the cover gets made

Opening Remarks Trump's obsession with factory jobs that no longer exist	8
Bloomberg View Trouble at the U.S. Census • "Drain the swamp" goes down the drain	10
Movers ▲ Wonder Woman breaks a glass ceiling ▼ Kids today don't want a summer job	13
Global Economics
"America First" opens the door wider for Russia and China in the Caribbean	14
If you're trying to get your kids into the right school, Beijing may be worse than New York	15
India is behind on nuclear power but hopes to use it to lead on climate change	17
Companies/Industries
Nissan makes a risky bet on rental fleets	18
Japan's Nitori managed 30 consecutive banner years by rearranging the furniture	19
Israeli TV producers, drawing ideas from the region's chaos, are generating profits abroad	20
Politics/Policy
What good is a Treasury Department if you don't have a staff to run it?	22
How tiny Qatar ran afoul of its Arab neighbors in the Gulf	23
Trump stiffens the world on the Green Climate Fund	24
Technology
Silicon Valley's secret source of foreign workers	26
China's Twitter comes back from the dead	28
The culture at Badoo is, um, different. Just ask the mermaids at the office party	30
Markets/Finance
Harvard's endowment is forced to face some hard veritas	32
Stockpickers are having tough times, but they're thriving Down Under	33
Twenty years into Chinese rule in Hong Kong, mainland banks dominate its IPO market	34
The Butcher of Sweden has some sharp words for Ericsson	35
Focus On/The Cloud
Adobe survived the switch from sales to subscriptions	37
Master bath or eat-in kitchen? Real estate agents get intel on your dreams	38
Dr. Cloud's diagnoses are sharp. Her bedside manner needs work	39
Dropbox's Drew Houston on the marriage of business and the cloud: "It's a mess"	40
Features
Debrief: Tom Barrack The founder of Colony Capital on his role advising Trump	42
Quid Pro Whoa The end of the biggest, most efficient bribery machine in modern business	46
Eurodivision The continent's kitschy annual pop contest grows costly—and conflicted	52
Channel Surfing BuzzFeed stakes out new territory on the tube	60
Etc.
How Did I Get Here? Life lessons to guide you from the mailroom to the C-suite, from the folks who've made the trip	67
I interviewed more than 100 business leaders. Here's what I learned	72
And for some free advice, consult your computer	76

①
"The story is about Odebrecht, a Brazilian construction company that bribed government officials in exchange for contracts."

"How shameful. Thank God the United States of America continues to be a global beacon of light when it comes to our government's honesty, sound judgment, and the prioritization of its citizens' needs above all else."

(Facepalm)

