

Contents

Preface

- I. Koinon and idion in Plato's Political Thought
Francisco L. Lisi . . . . . 13
- II. Gold, Women and Corruption of the polis
Veronika Konrádová . . . . . 29
- III. Die beste Staatsverfassung zwischen Komik und Ernst
Jakub Jinek . . . . . 44
- IV. Koina ta tôn philôn in Platons Politeia
Aleš Havlíček . . . . . 60
- V. Der echte Freund im Phaidon
Kryštof Boháček . . . . . 74
- VI. Dialectics, Friendship and Malevolence in Plato's Philebus
Bernat Torres . . . . . 87
- VII. Pasa polis koinônia tis esti
Simon Weber . . . . . 112
- VIII. "Being Common for Use as among Friends"
Eckart Schütrumpf . . . . . 131
- IX. Aristotle's Criticism of Plato's "Communist Ideals"
Manuel Knoll . . . . . 157
- X. Everything Is in Common or Everything Is Used in Common?
Giovanni Giorgini . . . . . 176
- XI. Primary Friendship in the City
Elena Irrera . . . . . 193

XII. Pros to anthropeuesthai
Arianna Fermani . . . . .	.211
XIII. Koina ta tôn philôn in Diogenes the Cynic
Jaroslav Cepko . . . . .	.224
Abbreviations . . . . .	.236
Bibliography . . . . .	.239
Index locorum . . . . .	.251