

Contents

Notes on editors and contributors

x

Foreword

xv

1 More fulfilling lives through sport: an intersubjective justification for balancing elite sport and sport-for-all 1

CESAR R. TORRES AND DOUGLAS W. MCLAUGHLIN

An intersubjective moral approach to sport 2

Sport-for-all and elite sport: a reciprocal relationship 5

Conclusions 10

2 Elite sports: what is it good for?: the case of EYOF Utrecht 2013 14

KOEN BREEDVELD AND PAUL HOVER

Introduction 14

Elite sporting events: beyond economic effects 15

EYOF Utrecht 2013 18

EYOF research 19

Conclusion 25

3 Arguments and evidence of bridging elite performance and mass participation sports from an economic perspective 30

CHRISTOPH BREUER AND PAMELA WICKER

Introduction 30

Individual level 30

Organisational level 36

Conclusion 37

- 4 The question of the trickle-down effect in Danish sport: can a relationship between elite sport success and mass participation be identified? 41
RASMUS K. STORM AND TRYGVE LAUB ASSERHØJ
- Introduction* 41
The dissemination and institutionalisation of the trickle-down effect idea 42
Confronting the idea of the trickle-down effect 43
Danish evidence: can a relationship between elite sport success and mass participation be identified? 44
Elite-inspired Danish sports participants 44
Developments in Danish membership figures in relation to sporting success 46
Trickle-down effects in Danish football and team handball 47
Conclusions and policy implications 52
- 5 Two Solitudes: grass-roots sport and high-performance sport in Canada 57
PETER DONNELLY AND BRUCE KIDD
- Sport in Canada: before the Montréal Olympics* 57
The Montréal moment 58
Development of Canadian sport policy 62
Some consequences of the emerging bipartite system 64
Conclusion: re-building the pyramid? 66
- 6 The problem with the pyramid: why most models of talent development are flawed 72
RICHARD BAILEY AND DAVID COLLINS
- Introduction* 72
Pyramids, trickle down and foundation stones 72
The presumption of early specialisation 74
Developmental concerns of early specialisation 76
Talent development as developing abilities 77
Potential and performance 77
Development and inclusion 79
A Darwinian conclusion 80
- 7 Opportunities for 'all' versus 'gold' for sport and country: a South African discourse 85
CORA BURNETT
- Introduction* 85
South Africa's sport policy frameworks 86
The National Sport and Recreation Plan 88
Mass participation in sport 89

	Elite sport	92
	Sport-for-development	94
	Conclusion	96
8	The Paralympic Movement and sport-for-all: elite, recreational and inclusive sport for development	100
	MARY A. HUMS AND ELI A. WOLFF
	The Paralympic Movement	100
	The Paralympic Games	100
	Recreational sport opportunities	102
	Issues facing the Paralympic Movement	102
	Inclusive sport for development and peace	104
	The way forward	106
9	Elite sport and sport-for-all: tales of a small country	108
	URI SCHAEFER
	Introduction	108
	Overview	108
	General: establishing a strategy	109
	Executing the strategy	112
	Conclusion	118
10	Sexual exploitation in women's sport: can female athletes respond to it?	119
	STILIANI 'ANI' CHRONI
	Real stories and the choices athletes have for responding	119
	Alternative pathways to support sport dreams and experiences	127
	Conclusion	130
11	A sporting utopia: easing the essential tension in sport policy	134
	DAVE COLLINS AND RICHARD BAILEY
	Introduction	134
	The policy pendulum	135
	Three Worlds	137
	Clues to generating a Three World-focused system	141
	Conclusion	142
	Index	147