Promoting public health research, policy, practice, and education is the mission of the American Journal of Public Health. As we widen our scope to embrace global issues, we also sharpen our focus to support the needs of public health practitioners. We invite contributions of original unpublished research, opinion and commentary, departments, and letters to the editor.

The Journal is printed on acid-free recycled paper.

Cover. On the cover this month, an Ethiopian man is interviewed in his home by Sedafa health clinic volunteers as part of an effort to access the health of the community. Nursing students from the University of Addis Ababa worked with foreign volunteers on this outreach initiative. According to Stewart Landers and Gabriel Stover, "The use of community health workers (CHWs) by institutions in the form of volunteers, treatment support, and translator dates back to public health's inception. One could argue that public health was built by these workers. . . . In celebration of those who are on the forefront and the institutions and organizations that employ them, this theme issue is meant to highlight CHW best practices, CHW training, and the ways in which the work of CHWs is evaluated." (See their Editor's Choice on page 2198.) Cover concept and selection by AJPH Image Editor Aleisha Kropf.
