

CONTENTS

Tables and Figures	xiii
About the Author	xv
Acknowledgment.....	xvii
Introduction: The Chicken Milanese Problem	1
1 On Your Marks	13
2 Sound It Out.....	27
3 Reading at a Glance.....	55
4 Words, Words, Words	77
5 Reading Comprehension.....	105
6 Becoming a Reader.....	135
7 Reading After the Digital Revolution	159
Conclusion: The Utility of Theory	187
Works Cited.....	201
Index	229

LIST OF TABLES AND FIGURES

Tables

Table 1.1. Watching a cash register.....	14
Table 6.1. Examples personal to the author of how motivation relates to the value and expectation associated with different behaviors.....	142
Table 7.1. Children's report of time spent per day on activity with media.....	167
Table C.1. Conclusions drawn	189

Figures

Figure I.1. One letter, different fonts	4
Figure I.2. Ambiguous letters.....	4
Figure I.3. Reversible figures.....	5
Figure I.4. Medicine packaging.....	7
Figure 1.1. A pictograph of a ram.....	16
Figure 1.2. The ambiguity of pictographs.....	17
Figure 1.3. Writing is a code for what you say.....	19
Figure 1.4. The relationship of word sound and meaning.....	19
Figure 1.5. Letters, translation rules, sound, and meaning	21
Figure 1.6. The phonemes used in American English.....	22
Figure 2.1. Natural scene with T's and L's.....	28
Figure 2.2. Alphabetic shapes.....	29
Figure 2.3. Letter confusion matrix.....	30
Figure 2.4. Letter features	31
Figure 2.5. Letter identification network.....	32
Figure 2.6. Visual representation of the sound of a spoken sentence.....	34
Figure 2.7. Comparison of accents	35
Figure 2.8. Visual illusion.....	37

Figure 2.9. First-grade reading proficiency in European countries.	43
Figure 2.10. Average results from the Progress in International Reading Literacy Study (PIRLS) administered to 10-year-olds around the world.....	44
Figure 3.1. Letters, sounds, and meaning.....	56
Figure 3.2. Letters, sounds, meaning, and spelling.....	57
Figure 3.3. How one might assume words are identified.....	60
Figure 3.4. How words are identified—a more complete model.....	60
Figure 3.5. Ambiguous letters.	62
Figure 3.6. Digits can substitute for letters.....	63
Figure 3.7. Silent reading.....	67
Figure 4.1. Letters, sound, spelling, and meaning.	77
Figure 4.2. Alternative representations for word definitions	82
Figure 4.3. A meaning network for the concept spill	84
Figure 4.4. Words activate related words	85
Figure 4.5. Expanded network of word meanings for spill	87
Figure 5.1. Model of reading expanded to include sentence representations.....	109
Figure 5.2. A cartoon of the mental representation of a simple sentence	112
Figure 5.3. Mental representation of two sentences.....	112
Figure 5.4. Multiple sentences	113
Figure 5.5. Model of reading expanded to include the idea-web	114
Figure 5.6. Model of reading expanded to include the situation model.....	120
Figure 5.7. Comparison of comprehension supported by reading skills or background knowledge.....	123
Figure 6.1. Reading virtuous cycle	139
Figure 6.2. Reading virtuous cycle with self-concept added.....	146
Figure 7.1. Tree octopus	165
Figure 7.2. Graph of word consumption	169
Figure C.1. Model of reading.....	193