

Contents

	Page
Abbreviations	xv
1 INTRODUCTION	1
What is aid? 2 Who receives aid? 3 Who gives aid? 3
What is effectiveness? 6 Purposes of studying effectiveness 6
Dynamics of aid policy 7 A basic finding 7 Successes and difficulties of aid 10 Reasons for failure: the donors' side 11
Recipient failings 13 Categorization of countries 13
2 THE MACROECONOMIC CONTRIBUTION OF AID	15
I. Introduction	15
II. Problems of interpretation	16
Fungibility 17 Historical causes of growth 18 The scale of aid 19 Aid and growth: a calculation 20
III. Aid, savings, and growth	21
Measuring real aid flows 22 Aid and savings 24 Aid and government expenditure 25 Aid and self-reliance 26
IV. Aid and exports	27
V. Conclusions	29
Research since 1985 31
Notes	31
3 AID AND POVERTY	35
I. Introduction	35
II. The nature of poverty	36
Identity of the poor 36 Women and rural poverty 37
Income, consumption, and services 37 Urban poor 38
III. The record of aid	39
Welfare indicators 40 Trends in aid 40
IV. Sectoral and project impact	41
Goods, services, and purchasing power 42 Choice of technology 45
Basic services 45 Policy dialogue 46 Rural credit 47
Cost recovery 47
V. Institutional change	48
Aid and land reform 49 Administration 50
Non-governmental organizations 51

VI. Public works	52
VII. Intra-family poverty	53
VIII. Conclusions	54
Work since 1985	55
Notes	55
4 POLICY DIALOGUE	58
I. Introduction	58
Some definitions and distinctions	59
Is there a universal prescription?	60
II. The International Monetary Fund	62
Fund resources	64
Adjustment capacity in the poorest countries	64
Performance of programmes	65
Adjustment within given resources	66
III. The World Bank and Structural Adjustment Lending	68
Trend estimation	71
IV. Other donors and policy dialogue	72
V. Recipient experience of dialogue	73
India	73
Colombia	75
Tanzania	76
VI. Policy dialogue: the lessons so far	78
Strengthening recipient capacities	79
Dialogue and technical cooperation	80
Research since 1985	82
Notes	83
5 PERFORMANCE AND EVALUATION: PROJECT, PROGRAMME, AND FOOD AID	86
I. Introduction	86
II. Assessing project aid	86
How are assessments made?	86
Experience with evaluation	87
Institutional learning	89
Features of project performance	89
Rates of return	89
Projects and poverty	90
Projects and institution building	91
Projects and women	92
Projects and the environment	94
Projects and self-reliance	95
III. Agriculture projects	96
Overall evaluations	96
Some examples of sub-sectoral experience	98
Agricultural research	98
Integrated rural development and crop production projects	101
Irrigation:
(i) Trends in aid to irrigation	103
(ii) Current issues in irrigation development	104
Livestock projects in Africa	105
Lessons from agricultural projects	107
IV. Industrial projects	109
Introduction	109
Trends in industrial lending	109
Development finance corporations	111
Small-scale industry	113
Issues in aid for industry	114
Technical choice	114
Tying	116
Rectifying deficiencies	116
Concluding comments	117

V.	Education and population	118
	Education 118 Population 121 Other sectors 123
VI.	Programme aid	123
	Introduction 123 Increasing absorptive capacity 124 Assessing programme aid 125 Maintenance and local costs 126 For the future 127
VII.	Food aid	130
	Introduction 130 Effectiveness 130 Programme food aid: macroeconomic effects and 'disincentives' 130 Project food aid 133 Food security 134 Three essential elements 135
VIII.	Concluding remarks	136
	Research since 1985 137
	Notes	138
6	TECHNICAL COOPERATION	143
	I. Introduction	143
	Methodology and evaluation 143
	II. The evidence	145
	General determinants of effectiveness and negative bias in the evidence 155 Sectors and subjects 146 Facilitating resource flows 152 Beneficiaries: impact on poverty 152 Non-governmental organizations 153 Participation of women 154 TC processes 154 Experts 157 Evaluations of TC effectiveness 159
	III. Institutional perspectives	160
	The multilateral development banks 160 Effectiveness and field operations 162
	IV. Effectiveness and the TC planning framework: self-reliance	164
	Self-reliance: a point of departure 165
	V. Conclusions	166
	Common inadequacies 167 Contextual considerations 168 Experts and counterparts 169 MDBs and the UN system 170 Coordination 170 TC sectoral reviews 171 Studies since 1985 171
	Notes	172
7	THE SYSTEMIC EFFECTS OF AID AND THE ROLE OF COORDINATION	174
	I. Introduction	174
	Systemic effects 174 Proliferation 175 Complementary domestic resources 176 Donor competition 177 Some countervailing forces 179
	II. Coordination and management	179
	Country and higher-level coordination 179 Current thinking 181 Coordination on the ground 181 Other models 182 Role of coordination 183

III.	Obstacles to coordination	184
	The donor side 184 The recipient side 185
IV.	Coordination: what must be done	185
	The recipients' tasks 185 Strengthening consultative groups 186
	Programme aid and coordination 187 The Bank and the Fund 187
	CGs and Roundtables: further development 188
V.	Conclusions	188
	Work since 1985 188
	Notes	189
8	AID AND MARKET FORCES	191
I.	Introduction	191
II.	The destination of aid	193
	The increase in on-lending to the private sector 194 Promotion of private sector development 194 Development of marketing 195
	Aid for industrial complexes 195 Programme lending 195
III.	Two case histories	196
	India 196 Malawi 198
IV.	The future	199
	Two qualifications 200 Experience since 1985 201
	Notes	202
9	MULTILATERAL-BILATERAL COMPARISONS	203
I.	Introduction	203
	A historical note 203
II.	Donors and recipients	204
	Multilateral-bilateral shares of ODA 205
III.	A spectrum of official institutions	205
	Bilateral agencies 205 Japan 206 The USA and France 206
	Germany and Italy 207 The UK, The Netherlands, and Canada 208
	The smaller donors 208 Bilateral advantages 208 The middle of the spectrum: EEC development assistance agencies 209 Arab development assistance 210 Multilateral official institutions 210
	The World Bank Group 212 The Regional Development Banks 213
IV.	The pressures on ODA	214
V.	Comparative advantages	215
	Competition among aid channels 216 The future 217
VI.	Aid-tying	219
	Associated financing 220 Experience since 1985 221
	Notes	222
10	SUMMARY: CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS	224
I.	Introduction	224
	Categorization of countries 226
II.	Aid and growth	227

III. Aid and poverty	228
Doing more to combat poverty 229
The wider context 231
IV. Policy dialogue	231
The IMF 232
The World Bank 233
Other agencies 233
V. Project aid	234
Projects and sustainability 235
Projects and women 235
Projects and the environment 235
Improving the learning process 236
Inter-agency exchange 236
The fund-channelling function 237
VI. Programme lending	238
VII. Food aid	239
A concluding remark on 'performance' 240
VIII. Technical cooperation	240
IX. Coordination	242
Strengthening Consultative Groups 243
Further coordination measures 243
Bank-Fund coordination 243
X. Aid and market forces	243
XI. Multilateral-bilateral comparisons	245
Aid-tying 246
XII. A new approach to aid for the poorest countries	246
Annex A List of Studies Undertaken	248
Annex B Synopses of Country Studies	249
B1 Bangladesh	249
B2 Colombia	252
B3 India	257
B4 Kenya	261
B5 Malawi	266
B6 Mali	271
B7 South Korea	277
Annex C Terms of Reference	280
Bibliography	287
Index	311