

CONTENTS

Foreword.....	vii
General Introduction.....	viii

Winter Semester

Session 1. What is literature?	11
– Introduction to the main aims of the course and a discussion based on your answers to the unit's title. An initial comparison of three short texts.
Session 2. Approaching texts.....	13
– Two means of looking at texts, literary or otherwise.
Session 3. Narrative Development and Character.	18
– Ways in which written and oral texts, as well as many other aspects of our lives, follow recognizable patterns, and the functions and creation of characters in narrative.
Session 4. Convention and genre: the sonnet.	32
– An introduction to the concepts of convention and genre through looking at sonnets as a specific example of a developing literary genre.
Session 5. Convention and genre: genre analysis.	35
– A broader consideration of how we might begin to consider the meaning of creative works by looking at them as examples of a certain type or types.
Session 6. Narrative and point of view.....	41
– The significance of how a story is told, who tells it and what details are put in or left out.
Session 7. Persona and tone.....	48
– Looking at the use of tone and persona in prose and poetry.
Session 8. Parallelism and deviation.	53
– A look at the semantic, syntactic and phonetic patterning and breaking of conventions which occurs in literary texts.
Session 9. Figures of speech.....	57
– “Poetic” aspects of daily language that are present in everyday use but highlighted in literary discourse: metaphor, simile, symbol, irony and so on.
Session 10. Allusion and Intertextuality.....	68
– A consideration of how literary texts refer not just to the world of everyday experience but to other texts.

Session 11. Register and representation	74
– Ways in which literature uses language from a variety of discourses representing numerous and different social positions and approaches to the world.
Session 12. Style in Changing Social and Historical Contexts.	79
– A closer look at the choice of particular words in literary texts, and an examination of how texts separated in time differ.
Session 13. Interpretation and criticism.	83
– A workshop and discussion intended as a practical preparation for the first written assignment in the course, an essay in which a text will be analysed.

Summer Semester

Session 1. Introductory.	87
– A comparison of four poems from different periods.
Session 2. Anglo–Saxon Literature.	91
– The Battle of Maldon , The Seafarer , riddles and kennings.
Session 3. The Middle–English Period.....	101
– Sir Thomas Malory's Morte d'Arthur , Geoffrey Chaucer's Canterbury Tales , secular and religious lyrics, medieval drama.
Session 4. The Renaissance.	116
– The public and the private: poems by Sir Thomas Wyatt, Sir Philip Sidney, John Donne.
Session 5. Shakespeare.	120
– The nature of Elizabethan theatre, Shakespeare's King Lear .
Session 6. The Seventeenth Century.	130
– Three versions of pastoral: poems by Ben Jonson and John Milton, a pamphlet by Jerard Winstanly.
Session 7. The Eighteenth Century.....	142
– Civil society: satirical prose (Jonathan Swift) and poems by Alexander Pope and Thomas Gray.
Session 8. Romanticism.....	154
– Revolt and meditation: fiction (Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley) and poetry (William Blake and William Wordsworth).
Session 9. American Literature – The Nineteenth Century.....	164
– The democratic individual: prose by Herman Melville and Henry David Thoreau, poetry by Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson.
Session 10. The Victorian Period.	177
– Male–female relationships in the novel (George Eliot) and poetry (Robert Browning, Matthew Arnold).

Session 11. The Twentieth Century – American Modernist Poetry	183
– “Make it new!”: Ezra Pound, William Carlos Williams, T.S. Eliot, Wallace Stevens.
Session 12. The Twentieth Century – British Modernist Prose.	190
– Turning inwards: D.H. Lawrence, Virginia Woolf, James Joyce.
Session 13. Postmodernism(s) and Postcolonialism(s).	210
– Poems by Frank O’Hara and Tom Leonard, prose by Thomas King and Salman Rushdie.
Session 14. Credit test.	