

Table of Contents

1. Speech-Language Therapy (SLT) – definition and approach to the field	14
1.1 Linguistic, medical, psychological and pedagogical disciplines in the field of speech communication	15
2. Important concepts in the development of SLT in the Czech Republic	17
2.1 SLT as speech education in the reflexological conception of the CNS	17
2.2 Impaired ability of communication	18
2.3 Speech communication disorders – a psycholinguistic approach	21
3. Psycholinguistically oriented approach to SLT	24
3.1 Speech communication as a complex process	24
3.2 Communication chain	25
3.3 Disorders of speech communication	27
4. Organization of SLT care in the Czech Republic.
Equipment of SLT department	30
4.1 SLT department in the branch of Ministry of Health	30
4.2 Logopaedic programmes in the branch of Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports	32
4.2.1 Programmes of elementary schools and special schools aimed at speech therapy	32
4.2.2 Logopaedic care of special pedagogical centres.	33
4.2.3 Logopaedic care within pre-school institutions	34

4.2.4 Logopaedic counselling at special schools, elementary practical schools	34
4.2.5. Speech therapy care within pedagogical-psychological advisory centres	35
4.2.6 Qualification	35
4.3 SLT departments in the branch of Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs	35
4.4 Professional organizations in the area of SLT	37
4.5 Educating pupils with communication disorders in the Czech education system	37
5. SLT assessment – rules, types of examination, differential diagnostics of speech communication disorders	41
5.1 Aims of SLT assessment, types of examination	41
5.1.1 Complex SLT examination contains	42
5.1.2 Focus of the aimed SLT examination	43
5.2 Differential diagnostics of speech communication disorders	43
5.2.1 Differential diagnostics of developmental speech communication disorders	43
5.2.2 Differential diagnostics of the acquired speech communication disorders of adult people	45
6. Logopaedic therapy – rules and real targets of individual and group SLT	46
6.1 Realistic aim of logopaedic therapy	47
6.2 Individual logopaedic therapy	48
6.3 Group logopaedic therapy	48
6.4 Sections of complex logopaedic therapy of speech communication disorders	49
7. Pregragual university study of SLT in the Czech Republic	52
7.1 The forms of study at faculties of education at universities in the Czech Republic	53
7.2 The study programme of SLT at University of Hradec Králové	55
7.2.1 Admission to study and graduate's qualification	56

7.2.2	Credit system	57
7.2.3	Curriculum	57
7.2.4	Qualification performance of the branch: Special pedagogy – SLT	62
8.	Developmental neurogenic motor speech and language disorders	63
8.1	Developmental dysarthria	63
8.1.1	Therapeutic programme for developmental dysarthria	65
8.2	Developmental dysphagia	69
8.2.1	Food intake and swallowing disorders	71
8.3.	Developmental dysphasia (specific language impairment – SLI)	75
8.3.1	Advantages and limitations of long-term therapy children with developmental dysphasia	76
9.	Acquired neurogenic motor speech and language disorders	80
9.1	Acquired dysarthria	80
9.1.2	Technical aids and instrumental programmes	84
9.2	Acquired dysphagia	85
9.2.1	Therapy of swallowing disorders	85
9.3.	Aphasia	86
9.3.1	Recovery therapy of aphasia	89
10.	Complex case study in the field of developmental communication disorders	90
10.1	Introduction – fluency speech disorders and impaired development of speech abilities	90
10.2	Case study – anamnestic date and start etap of SLT	94
10.3	Case study – course of therapeutic interventions	94
10.4	Case study – current status in the end of study	97
10.5	Conclusions from the case study	98
11.	Complex case study in the field of acquired communication disorders	101
11.1	Introduction – acquired neurogenic and auditory disturbances	101

11.2 Case study – anamnestic date and start etap of SLT	104
11.3 Case study – course of therapeutic interventions	105
11.4 Case study – current status in the end of study	106
11.5 Conclusions from the case report	109
Conclusion	110
Bibliography	113
Summary	121
Souhrn	123
Subject index	125