

Contents

---

Acknowledgments	vii
Contributors	ix
Chapter 1
Introduction	1
Larry May, Marilyn Friedman, and Andy Clark
Part I
Ethics Naturalized?	17
Chapter 2
Ethics Naturalized: Ethics as Human Ecology	19
Owen Flanagan
Chapter 3
How Moral Psychology Changes Moral Theory	45
Mark L. Johnson
Chapter 4
Whose Agenda? Ethics versus Cognitive Science	69
Virginia Held
Part II
Moral Judgments, Representations, and Prototypes	89
Chapter 5
The Neural Representation of the Social World	91
Paul M. Churchland
Chapter 6
Connectionism, Moral Cognition, and Collaborative Problem Solving	109
Andy Clark

Chapter 7
Gestalt Shifts in Moral Perception	129
Peggy DesAutels
Chapter 8
Pushmi-pullyu Representations	145
Ruth Garrett Millikan
Part III
Moral Emotions	163
Chapter 9
Sympathy, Simulation, and the Impartial Spectator	165
Robert M. Gordon
Chapter 10
Simulation and Interpersonal Utility	181
Alvin I. Goldman
Chapter 11
Empathy and Universalizability	199
John Deigh
Chapter 12
Feeling Our Way toward Moral Objectivity	221
Naomi Scheman
Part IV
Agency and Responsibility	237
Chapter 13
Justifying Morality and the Challenge of Cognitive Science	239
James P. Sterba
Chapter 14
Moral Rationality	257
Susan Khin Zaw
Chapter 15
Moral Agency and Responsibility: Cautionary Tales from Biology	281
Helen E. Longino
Chapter 16
Planning and Temptation	293
Michael E. Bratman
Index	311	