

CONTENTS

Figures	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction: 'Seeing the brick'	1
'If the story's so cock-eyed, what's the point of it?' 4
'So, what's the answer? Visual education?' 7
1 Thinking about animated film	10
What is animation? 10
Flipbooks, frame-by-frame and funny faces 11
Case study: Early comic strip cartoon concepts 17
Disney and the realist principle 21
Case study: The problem of realism 24
True animation? 28
2 Notes towards a theory of animation	35
Styles and approaches 35
Terms and conditions: Orthodox animation 36
Case study: Deconstructing the cartoon 39
Terms and conditions: Experimental animation 43
Case studies: Non-objective and non-linear animation 46
Backward looking, forward thinking: Cases studies in developmental animation 51
3 Once upon a time: Narrative strategies	68
Definitions and devices 69
Metamorphosis 69
Condensation 76
Synecdoche 80
Symbolism and metaphor 83
Fabrication 90

CONTENTS

Associative relations 93
Sound 97
Acting and performance 104
Choreography 111
Penetration 122

- 4 25 ways to start laughing 127
- 1 Magical surprises 128
 - 2 The power of personality 129
 - 3 The visual pun 131
 - 4 Expectation and exploitation 134
 - 5 'Just a minute, Chubby—you ain't seen half the kid's repertoire-e-e!':
Some old saws 135
 - 6 'Catch that and paint it green!': Adult Avery 140
 - 7 Extending the premise of the visual gag 141
 - 8 The development of alienation devices 142
 - 9 Literal, visual and verbal gags 144
 - 10 On black humour 145
 - 11 Recognising torment and taboo 146
 - 12 Jones' Road Runner gags 150
 - 13 Some theories on character comedy 152
 - 14 The shaggy dog story 156
 - 15 Discontinued lines 160
 - 16 Accidents will happen 161
 - 17 Objects have a life of their own 162
 - 18 'The sight of 40-year-old genitalia is too disgusting, is it?':
Self-conscious humour 163
 - 19 Everything can mean its opposite 167
 - 20 'Yabba-Dabba-Doo!' 168
 - 21 Telling it over and over again 169
 - 22 25 ways to exaggerate, understate and alienate 172
 - 23 Dedicated to those who disapprove but continue to watch 174
 - 24 Driessen's comedy of cruelty 179
 - 25 Techno-titters and post-modern forms 180
- 5 Issues in representation 187
- The body in question 188
- 'Faster than a speeding bullet . . .': Men and masculinity 190
- The concept of 'everyman' 196
- Wayward girls and wicked women: The feminine aesthetic 198

CONTENTS

Cross-dressing, transvestism, gender-bending, cross-species coupling and other unusual trends 203

Case study: Is Jerry a girl? 208

Race in context 215

6 Animation and audiences: 'My mother used to call me Thumper!' 222

Cinema and the spectator 222

The Disney version 223

Disney and mass observation 226

Nostalgia's not what it used to be: Disney, then and now 232

Towards a conclusion 242

Notes 244

Bibliography 250

Index 258

Filmography 262

Further acknowledgements

I am grateful to the following copyright holders for the provision of stills to be used as figures in this book:

Playful Pluto (1934) courtesy of Disney and the BFI

The Haunted Hotel (1907) courtesy of the BFI

Composition in Blue (1940) courtesy of the BFI

Lapiz (1965) courtesy of the London Film Maker's Co-operative and the BFI

The Street (1976) courtesy of the National Film Board of Canada and the BFI