My warm thanks go to Pilgrims Language Courses, Canterbury and the many fellow teachers I have learned from through team teaching and demonstration lessons over the last 15 years: Mark Thistlewood, Paul Fagg, Judy Baker, Kevin Batchelor, Rick Cooper, Michael Gradwell, Tessa Woodward, Janet Ohana, Mario Rivaolucci, John Morgan, Jean-Paul Creton, James Dixey, Cynthia Beresford, David Hill, Mick Reid, Imelda Harling, Sue Greenham, Rene Boschwitz, Gerry Kenny, Penny Ur and Andrew Wright.

I am particularly grateful to the British Council Chester and Leeds and the 7 UK summer schools where I have been able to pilot techniques, and to the hundreds of Pilgrims students from Spain and Japan and students in Germany, Sweden, Austria, Greece and Israel who have helped to teach me what works and what doesn't work.

I am very lucky to work with thousands of teachers in 10 different countries every year. I have absorbed their good ideas like a sponge. I'm sorry if I can't remember where each good idea originally came from, but I thank you all for sharing so freely. That's what networks are for. Through this book I am now sharing back to you.
