

■ IN BRIEF	11	Executive shuffle at Facebook; Nestlé and Starbucks
■ AGENDA	12	Next week in Jerusalem; will Tencent's profit shrink?
■ THE BLOOMBERG VIEW	12	A better fix for the EU's data-protection crisis
■ REMARKS	14	Amazon's golden opportunity to boost diversity
1 BUSINESS	18 22	Abu Dhabi wants to expand beyond crude—way beyond Corporate bullies could be the next workplace pariahs
2 TECHNOLOGY	24 26 28 29	Facebook bans terrorist pages, but they keep returning Space is getting crowded. Transponders can help How Flipkart flipped—and won $16 billion from Walmart Yesterday's shipping container is today's TerraFarm
3 PERSONAL FINANCE	31 33 34 36	Risk parity, the complex new way to diversify Annuities are pricey, difficult, and underutilized The bull market shows signs of exhaustion PayPal, Apple Pay, and other phone buttons slug it out
4 ECONOMICS	38 40 41	Indicators flash red, but we're not overheating (yet) As Western companies abandon Iran, China steps up Brazil needs money, but privatization is a tough sell
5 POLITICS	45	The Democrats' un-Tea Party-like bid to win back power

	47	James Comey on Trump vs. his old grocery store boss
	49	Women in Congress could see huge strides in 2018
■ PURSUITS	71 76 78 79 80	Now's the time to plan next year's Caribbean retreat Can Dominica become the first climate-resilient nation? Critic: Baha Mar is open, and business is booming The One: Shiseido's sunscreen laughs at water Game Changer: Bill Drayton's squad of world fixers

CORRECTION

The graphic for "Can Laws Make Us Equal?" (Features, May 7) suggested that Australia doesn't mandate paid parental leave. The country's 2010 Parental Leave Act mandates leave and pay for the primary caregiver.

FEATURES

50

The People Call Him AMLO

López Obrador, likely to be Mexico's next president, is a populist, but no Trump

56

A World Without Ads

Most of us see sales pitches everywhere. One online community doesn't

60

How to Make $1 Billion Betting On Horses

Bill Benter devised a foolproof algorithm for the racetrack