

Contents

Introduction	ix
Acknowledgements	xviii
1 Between faith and freedom: the Christian roots of Czech economic thought	1
Hus's predecessors 4
Hus's search for the Truth 7
Outside of the Reformation 13
You will be like the angels 15
2 Between occupation and mission: from Enlightenment to Institutionalization (1648–1882)	20
Interdisciplinary roots of economic thought in the Bohemian Crownlands 22
Between science and practice: Cameralism 22
The great trio: Becher, Hornigk, Schröder 25
Fruits of the Bohemian Enlightenment and National Revival 30
Cameral sciences 30
Václav Gustav Kopetz: break with tradition 34
The mathematization of economics and its noble cultivators 35
Bernard Bolzano and the Catholic ethos of the Bohemian Enlightenment 37
František Ladislav Rieger: the liberal enthusiast 41
František Ladislav Chleborád's inquiry into the nature of economics 43
Teaching economics in the Bohemian Crownlands 50
Enlightenment's economic sentiment in the Bohemian Crownlands 54
The encouragement of economics 54
The popularization of economics 58
The beginning of cooperative theories 60

3	Between economics and politics: from the glōrious beginnings to the bitter ends (1882–1948)	63
	Economics institutionalized: main figures and topics 66
	Albín Bráf: the founding father 66
	Josef Kaizl: between economics and politics 73
	František Čuhel: the unacknowledged genius 81
	Karel Engliš: the logic of human action 86
	Josef Macek: non-conventional liberalist and socialist 94
	Between capitalism and Socialism 99
	The beginnings of Czech Marxism 99
	To change the system: the cooperative Socialism 102
	To rationalize humankind: Laboretism 106
	The state as an entrepreneur 108
	Facing the crisis 110
	The first Great Depression and poor relief 110
	The Great Depression of 1930s and the beginning of planning 112
	Under pressure of Nazi occupation 115
	Short way from capitalism to Socialism 117
	Teaching economics across the centuries, states and political regimes 120
	Economic sentiment in the time of national emancipation (and de-emancipation) 125
4	Between theory and ideology: economics as a political tool (1948–1989)	134
	The Stalinist fifties 135
	The golden sixties 137
	The grey seventies and eighties 143
	Four faces of the Czech version of Marxism-Leninism 145
	Josef Goldmann: the macro-economic analysis of real Socialism 145
	Ota Šik: from Stalinism to the third way 148
	Karel Kosík: philosophizing economics! 152
	Miroslav Toms: scientific star 154
	Teaching economics in the time of Marxism-Leninism 157
	Outside of the mainstream: economics in exile and in the underground 165
	Epilogue: the unbearable lightness of economics	169
	Bibliography	173
	Index	184