

Contents

1. Introduction: Constitutionalism	1
Negative Constitutionalism	2
Positive Constitutionalism	6
Constitutionalism: A Fresh Start	9
Conclusion	19
2. Sovereignty	21
The Four Aspects of Sovereignty	23
The Value of Sovereignty	32
Is the Creation of a State Always Desirable?	41
A Note on the Supposed Passing of State Sovereignty	46
Conclusion	48
3. The Separation of Powers	51
The Point of the Separation of Powers	51
Approaching the Separation of Powers	56
Relationships Between Institutions	70
The Demands of the Separation of Powers	76
Conclusion	82
4. The Rule of Law	85
The Demands of the Rule of Law	86
The Rule of Law and the State	104
Conclusion	116
5. Civil Society	121
States and Private Groups	123
Civil Society and the Invisible Hand	133
Conclusion: Civil Society as a Principle of Constitutionalism	144
6. Democracy	147
Direct Democracy	148
Representative Democracy	154

The Indispensability of Political Parties	166
Conclusion	186
7. Subsidiarity	187
The Demands of Subsidiarity	188
The Application of Subsidiarity	205
Subsidiarity and National Self-determination	214
Conclusion	217
8. Conclusion: The Application of the Principles of Constitutionalism	219
The Interconnectedness of the Principles of Constitutionalism	220
Who Should Apply the Principles of Constitutionalism?	222
Justified Variation in the Application of the Principles	227
Justifiable Departures From the Principles of Constitutionalism	231
Appendix: Invisible Hand Systems	241
The Market as an Instance of the Invisible Hand	242
Invisible Hand Systems Contrasted With Direct Coordination Through Authority	250
Conclusion	253
Bibliography	255
Index	273