Contents

List of figures ix
Preface: toward a theory of 'spacing' through avant-garde action xv
Acknowledgements xxiii

Introduction: event-space: a performance model for architecture 1

Architecture as event 5
Event-space: a useful paradigm in motion 9
Space (becoming-performance of architecture) 11
Event (becoming-architecture of performance) 18
(Re)Birth of the will-to-destruction 28
Avant-gardism and modernism 35

1 Disciplining the bourgeois glory machine 53

"Our provisional theatre at Bayreuth" 53
The baroque model and post-revolutionary performativity 59
Garnier's architecture as mise-en-scène 66
The glory machine 75
The case of Bayreuth 78
A new public 83
The invisible theatre 90

2 Absolute space: universal landscapes 101

"The Beginning . . . The Birth . . ." 101
Absolute stage space 105
Symbolist "Theatre of the Mind" 107
Dancing architectures 112
Duncan's temple 116
Spatial rhythm and universal landscapes 121
Adolphe Appia 124

Architecture as temple-laboratory 130
Hellerau 133
Resisting the black void 143
The new monumentality of absolute space 146

3 Abstract space: toward an architecture of alienation 161
The "Troubled Art": avant-gardism divided 167
City as a "Montage of Attractions" 170
Stage space – Space Stage 175
Bauhaus festivities 180
Total Theatre: the "Great Stage Machine" 194
Architectures of alienation 199
Ghost in the machine 213

4 Abject space: toward an architecture of cruelty 233
Violence takes centre stage 234
Spatial violence 237
Bravo! And Boom, Boom! 242
Abjection: eROTic object 247
Palace of Culture 250
Enter Artaud (Flinging Bombs) 254
An architecture against architecture 256
A site of recovery 257
Dis-eased body 261
Ex-ploding space 266
De-centring architecture 281
Cruel machine 298

Conclusion: making architecture tremble 309
Nietzsche's architect(ure) 313
Building Babel 319

Bibliography 333
Index 357