

Contents

Acknowledgments xiii

Introduction: Political Campaign Communication—Theory,
Method, and Practice and the Emergence of a Discipline of Study xv
Robert E. Denton, Jr.

SECTION I: THEORY

- 1 The Functional Theory of Political Campaign Discourse 3
William L. Benoit
- 2 “What a Snob”: The Reconciliation of Higher Education and Neoliberalism in the 2012 Republican Presidential Primary 33
Luke Winslow and Carly de Anda
- 3 What is Happening There?: Norwegian Newspaper Coverage of the 2016 U.S. Presidential Election 55
Michael Nitz
- 4 Intensity of Face Threats in the 2008, 2012, and 2016 U.S.
Presidential Debates 77
William O. Dailey, Shelly S. Hinck, Robert S. Hinck, and Edward A. Hinck
- 5 Too Early to be Funny? An Analysis of Late-Night Comedy
During the 2016 U.S. Presidential Primaries 103
Michael Nitz, Allison Koehn, and Hayley McCarron

SECTION II: METHOD

- 6 Presidential Debate Coverage and Conflict Bias in the 2016 Campaign 125
Joan L. Conners
- 7 The Presidential Nomination Acceptance Speeches of Donald J. Trump and Hillary Clinton: Terministic Screens and Antagonist Worldview 141
Jim A. Kuypers
- 8 Making a Case for Textual Criticism: Hillary Studies and the State of Political Campaign Communication Scholarship 169
Melody Lehn
- 9 Barack Obama's Response to the "Angry Black Man" Race Card: A Critical Analysis of "A More Perfect Union" 189
Ronald E. Lee and Aysel Morin
- 10 Kennedy and Identification in Houston 219
J. David Trebing

SECTION III: PRACTICE

- 11 Political Election TV Spots 237
William L. Benoit
- 12 Campaign Politics of Sight and Sound: Populist Rhetoric in a Media Maelstrom 259
John S. Nelson and Anna Lorien Nelson
- 13 The Refutational Power of Ad Personam and Tu Quoque Attacks in Advancing Trump's "Change" Counter-Narrative During the 2016 General Election Presidential Debates 283
Kathryn M. Olson
- 14 Acting "Presidential": The Modern Campaign Meets the Ubiquitous Presidency 303
Joshua M. Scacco and Kevin M. Coe
- 15 Orchestrating "The Show": The 2016 Political Party Conventions in Historical Context 327
Theodore F. Sheckels
- 16 National Conventions: Evolving Functions and Forms 343
Tammy R. Vigil

17	Tweeting Our Differences: Comparing Candidate Communication in Mixed-Gender and Same-Gender Elections Lindsey M. Meeks	365
	Selected Bibliography	389
	Index	401
	About the Editor and Contributors	411

I have had the privilege to serve as editor of this book series, all around the focus of political communication broadly defined. I have also edited well over a dozen volumes over the years. There are always challenges working with very smart, busy, and diverse groups of scholars. However, I have actually come to enjoy the process. This project was no exception. This project brought together colleagues and friends, "new" and "old." I am most fortunate to work with such an outstanding group of scholars. Once again, the contributors have made this a most rewarding and enjoyable endeavor. I genuinely appreciate their participation in this volume. I also value their friendship.

I want to thank my colleagues in the Department of Communication at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (Virginia Tech). As now a continuing and long-term administrator of various sorts over the years, I am grateful to my colleagues for their continued collegiality and encouragement, as well as for their recognizing the importance of maintaining an active research agenda. Thanks also to Robert Sumichrast, dean of the Pamplin College of Business whose support allows my continued association with the Department of Marketing and the college. I am also most grateful to Elizabeth Spiller, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences who understands the importance of the "right mix" that makes the job of department head a privilege and pleasure. They both are outstanding mentors and administrators. I also want to personally thank Laura Purcell, a wonderful graduate student in the department, who heroically and under deadline assisted me with editing footnotes and preparing the selected bibliography. She certainly allowed me to be more efficient and on time.

Finally, as always, countless thanks to my wonderful wife, Rachel, a true blessing, friend, colleague and partner in my life. And also to my now grown