

Contents

Foreword ix

Acknowledgments xi

Chapter 1 Introduction 1

The fundamental regional land-use equation

The LUCIS mission

Part I Foundations

Chapter 2 What is LUCIS? 9

The origin of LUCIS

The five steps of LUCIS

Role-playing

Definitions

Chapter 3 Basic GIS concepts 15

A brief history of GIS

Vector versus raster data

The ArcGIS geoprocessing framework

Basic vector analysis tools

Basic raster analysis tools

Chapter 4 Logical arguments for suitability 45

A brief history of suitability modeling

Rules for combining spatial data

Single utility assignments for suitability modeling

Ranking strategies for single utility assignments

Multiple utility assignments for suitability modeling

	Part II The LUCIS model
Chapter 5	The case study	73
	Regional character
	Context
	Population growth
	Household size and urban densities
Chapter 6	Defining goals and objectives	81
	Statement of intent
	Goals and objectives
	Goals and objectives for the Florida case study
	A naming convention for managing models, input data, and results
Chapter 7	Data inventory and preparation	89
	Identifying potential data
	Data accuracy
	Data resources
	Map projections
	Cell size and the minimum mapping unit
	Derived datasets and documentation
	Dataset preparation for the Florida case study
Chapter 8	Defining and mapping land-use suitability	101
	General suitability concepts
	Defining and mapping land-use suitability for the Florida case study
Chapter 9	Integrating community values to determine land-use preference	127
	Suitability becomes preference
Chapter 10	Identifying potential land-use conflict	137
	Remove lands whose use will not change
	Normalize and collapse preference results
	Conceptualized conflict
	Conflict mapping
	The case study models
	Using the LUCIS results

Part III Seeing the future

Chapter 11 Future land-use allocation 165

The fundamental regional land-use equation revisited
Six steps for visualizing future land use

Chapter 12 Conclusion 189

The structural framework of LUCIS
The three most significant steps of LUCIS
Using LUCIS to visualize future land use
Where do we go from here?

Chapter assignments 203

Appendix 1 Goals and objectives example 219

Appendix 2 LUCIS case study goals and objectives 229

Appendix 3 Agriculture data inventory 239

Glossary 243

About the DVD 251

Data license agreement 267

About the authors 271

Index 273