

Contents

Introduction	1
1 The current system of fundamental rights protection in the European Union	7
1.1 Article 6(1) TEU: the recognition of binding legal value to the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union	7
1.2 The content of the Charter of Fundamental Rights	14
1.3 Article 6(3) TEU: the general principles of law concerning fundamental rights	17
1.4 The Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms as a source of inspiration for the development of general principles of law concerning fundamental rights	26
1.5 The relevance of the 'constitutional traditions common to the Member States' for the assessment of general principles of law concerning fundamental rights	28
1.6 The other means for the Court of Justice to elaborate general principles of law: (i) the influence of sources of international law; (ii) the inductive process from other provisions of the EU law; (iii) solicitation by other institutions, bodies, offices and agencies of the Union	30
1.7 Article 6(2) TEU: the provision of the accession of the European Union to the ECHR	35
1.8 Opinion 2/13 of the Court of Justice and the current relevance of the ECHR in the legal systems of the European Union and of the Member States	40
1.9 The impasse of the accession process and the relevance of the ECHR in the legal systems of the European Union and of the Member States in the event of accession	46
1.10 The possible alternatives to the accession	54

vi	General principles of EU law and the protection of fundamental rights
2	The relationship between the sources of fundamental rights protection in the EU legal order	57
2.1	The relationship between the Charter of Fundamental Rights and the ECHR. The relevance of the ECHR in the Union through the so-called homogeneity clause	57
2.2	The tendency of the Court of Justice to follow the European Court of Human Rights	65
2.3	The Court of Justice and the enhancement of the level of protection guaranteed under the ECHR	72
2.4	Real or apparent discrepancies between the jurisprudences of the two courts	77
2.5	The relationship between general principles of law and the ECHR. The relevance of the ECHR in the European Union through the general principles	94
2.6	The relationship between the Charter of Fundamental Rights and the general principles of law	96
2.7	The coordination between the rights and the principles of the Charter and the general principles of law	103
3	The role of the general principles of law concerning fundamental rights in the post-Lisbon case law of the Court of Justice	110
3.1	The substantial continuity of the interpretative approach of the Court of Justice before and after the Lisbon Treaty	110
3.2	The Charter and the general principles of law as interchangeable sources	112
3.3	The use of the Charter and general principles to ascertain the fundamental rights	115
3.4	The exclusive use of the Charter of Fundamental Rights	120
3.5	The exclusive use of general principles of law	127
3.6	The self-restraint approach of the Court of Justice	128
3.7	The possible extensive and/or evolutive interpretation of the written and the unwritten source	134
4	The role of the general principles of law beside and beyond the Charter	147
4.1	The autonomous role of the unwritten source of fundamental rights protection with respect to the written one	147
4.2	The application of the general principles of law when the Charter is not applicable ratione temporis	149
4.3	The complementary role of the general principles of law when the Charter cannot be applied ratione personae	151

4.4	The complementary role of the general principles of law when the Charter may not apply with respect to certain Member States	156
4.5	The integrative role of the general principles of law: the development of the acquis of the European Union	163
4.6	The reference to the legislation of the Member States as a limit to the integrative role of the general principles of law	172
4.7	The conservative role of the general principles of law to guarantee the specificities of the EU legal system	180
4.8	The survival of the conservative role of the general principles of law in the event of accession of the European Union to the ECHR	186
	Final remarks	193
	Bibliography	200
	Index	221