

Contents

List of Figures xi

Acknowledgments xiii

- 1 Public-Spirited Collective Action 1
  - A collective action problem 4
  - Collective action as a prisoner's dilemma 5
  - Synopsis 7

- 2 All-Or-Nothing Public Goods 13
  - How boycotts can be sustained 18
  - Nonviolent protest 20
  - The public relations (PR) game 22
  - On police brutality 26
  - Summary 30

- 3 Selective Social Incentives and Reputational Concerns 31
  - Social incentives 34
  - The iterated prisoner's dilemma 37
  - Small-scale and large-scale conventions 45
  - Reputational concerns 48
  - On reputation and cooperation 51
  - Reputation and civil rights activism 55
  - Commitments in Selma 61
  - Private vs. public preferences 65
  - Sympathy and moral concerns 67
  - Summary 71

- 4 Narrowly Rational Expressive Benefits 73
  - The benefits of participation 76
  - Self-serving expressive benefits 78
  - Perceptions of costs and benefits 82
  - More on the perception of costs and benefits: "As if" preferences 86
  - Correlated costs and benefits 88

- 5 Creating the Motivation to Participate in Collective Action 90
 Socially instrumental value 91
 Fulfilling obligations 93
 Successful collective action 100
- 6 Coordination Problems in Assurance Games 103
 Coordination vs. prisoner's dilemma problems 103
 Lynch mobs 107
 Graphs 109
 Coordination among political activists 112
 Tipping phenomena 116
 Real assurance games 118
 Political entrepreneurs 125
 Greensboro 133
 Data on the student sit-in participants 136
 Refusing to leave well enough alone 137
 Summary 140
- 7 A Formal Model of Collective Action 141
 Some properties of the supply-and-demand model 150
 Analysis of the supply-and-demand model 153
 The time path of the system 155
 Summary of deductions from the supply-and-demand model 164
 Analyzing the origins of the civil rights movement 165
 Changes in the strength of the opposition 166
 Coordinating preferences: Leadership and organizations 168
 Changes in government responsiveness 170
- 8 Strategies of Collective Action 173
 The Albany and Birmingham campaigns 180
 Modeling the Albany and Birmingham campaigns 185
- 9 The Rise and Fall of Collective Action 191
 Changes in the assurance game 194
 Satisfaction and the exhaustion of ideas 197
 Disappointment and backlash 198
 The decline of the civil rights movement 200
 The dynamics of rise and decline 206
 The time path of political mobilization 216
 Solution of the general equation 217

Stability conditions of the model	218
The path of the civil rights movement	220
10 Conclusion	230
References	241
Index	251