

CONTENTS

Notes on Contributors
Acknowledgements

vii
x

Introduction
Frank Vander Valk

1

PART I

History and Concepts

23

- 1 On the growing intellectual authority of neuroscience for political and moral theory: Sketch for a genealogy
Maurizio Meloni 25
- 2 Neuroscience as applied hermeneutics: Towards a critical neuroscience of political theory
Jan Slaby, Philipp Haueis, and Suparna Choudhury 50
- 3 Descartes on moral judgment and the power of the passions
Patricia Easton 74
- 4 Unpacking emotional baggage in political inquiry
John G. Gunnell 91

PART II

Neuroscience and Political Thinkers 117

- 5 Brain sculpting as moral practice: A neuro-Aristotelian approach 119
Leslie Paul Thiele
- 6 Hobbes, prudence, and neuroscience: Early modern strategies for negotiating contemporary subjectivity 140
James R. Martel
- 7 Think big: Toward a grand neuropolitics – or, Why I am not an immanent naturalist or vital materialist 156
Adrian Johnston
- 8 The neuropolitical habitus of resonant receptive democracy 178
Romand Coles

PART III

Issues in Neuroscience and Political Theory 199

- 9 Does deliberation make you angry? Neuroscience and theories of deliberative democracy 201
Marlene K. Sokolon
- 10 Bounded mirroring: Joint action and group membership in political theory and cognitive neuroscience 222
Machiel Keestra
- 11 The extension of political subjectivity 249
Frank Vander Valk
- 12 The challenge of gender research in neuroscience 268
Emily Ngubia Kuria
- Index* 288

