

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	1
1 Basic concepts	5
1.1 Introduction	5
1.2 The law of free expression and reasonable legislative choices	6
1.3 The 'speech causes harm' paradigm	17
1.4 Categorical rules and proportionality	22
1.5 Sedition law as a case study	29
2 Justifications for regulating speech	37
2.1 Direct and indirect justifications for regulating and protecting speech	37
2.2 The 'chilling effect' and the constitutional law of libel in the United States	39
2.3 Indirect arguments more generally	44
3 The distinction between coverage and protection	51
3.1 Introduction	51
3.2 Artistic and other forms of non-verbal expression	54
3.3 Commercial advertising	56
3.4 What lies at the core? A listener-focused approach	60
3.5 Conclusion	67
4 Rights versus rights/rights versus interests	69
4.1 Introduction	69
4.2 Rights versus rights: the free press/fair trial problem	70
4.3 Rights versus interests: an introduction	72
4.4 Rights versus interests in the United States and elsewhere: hate speech and libel law	74
4.5 Additional considerations	76

4.6	Private versus public impairments of interests	77
4.7	The special problem of copyright	80
4.8	Conclusion	82
5	Subsidies and content-neutral regulations	83
5.1	Introduction	83
5.2	Basic rules about regulating demonstrations	84
5.3	The problem of the hostile audience	90
5.4	The heckler's veto and the role of civil society	93
5.5	Government speech and explicit subsidies	96
5.6	Conclusion	103
6	New (?) challenges	104
6.1	Introduction	104
6.2	Problems associated with geography	105
6.3	Problems associated with scale	108
6.4	Problems associated with private control of important media	116
6.5	Conclusion	122
	Conclusion	124
	References	127
	Index	129