

Detailed Contents

Table of Legislation	xxi
Table of Treaties and Conventions	xxix
Table of Cases	xxxii

Part One Theoretical Principles

1 Defining the Constitution?	3
I. The meaning(s) of 'democracy'?	4
What is democratic governance? Some hypothetical examples	5
A constitution as a social and political contract?	7
II. The first 'modern' constitution?	9
The problem—majoritarianism	9
The solutions—representative government, federalism, a separation of powers, and supra-legislative 'fundamental' rights	10
Conclusion	17
Suggested further reading	18
Academic and political commentary	18
Case law and legislation	18
2 Parliamentary Sovereignty	19
Pre-1688—natural or divine law	19
The Diceyan (or orthodox) theory	20
The positive and negative limbs of Dicey's theory	21
The political source of parliamentary sovereignty—the 'glorious revolution'	21
I. Legal authority for the principle of parliamentary sovereignty	26
Substance or procedure? The enrolled Bill rule	27
The doctrine of implied repeal	28
Inconsistency with international law	29
II. Entrenching legislation—challenges to the orthodox position	30
Jennings' critique and the 'rule of recognition'	31
Is parliamentary sovereignty a British or English concept?	38
Women's enfranchisement	41
Conclusion	42
Suggested further reading	43
Academic and political commentary	43
Case law and legislation	43

3	The Rule of Law and the Separation of Powers	44
I.	The Diceyan perspective: the rule of law in the pre-welfare state	44
	Entick v Carrington (1765)	46
	Dicey's rule of law—process or substance?	47
	The 'independence of the judiciary'	48
II.	The rule of law in the welfare state	50
	Hayek —the road to serfdom	50
	Jones —the rule of law in the welfare state	51
	'Red light' and 'green light' theories	52
III.	Judicial regulation of government behaviour: the constitutional rationale	53
IV.	Principles of statutory interpretation	55
	The literal rule	56
	The golden rule	58
	The mischief rule	60
	Purposive (or 'teleological') interpretation	60
	Liversidge v Anderson (1942)	61
	R v IRC, ex p Rossminster Ltd (1980)	64
	Conclusion	65
V.	Stare decisis	66
	The London Tramways judgment (1898)	66
	The 1966 Practice Statement	67
VI.	Parliamentary sovereignty v the rule of law	67
	Ouster clauses— Gilmore (1957) and Anisminic (1969)	68
VII.	'Retrospective' law-making	70
	Retrospectivity in legislation—the War Damage Act 1965	70
	'Retrospectivity at common law'? Rape within marriage and conspiracy to corrupt public morals	71
	'Retrospective' or 'prospective' overruling?	75
	Conclusion	76
	Suggested further reading	76
	Academic and political commentary	76
	Case law and legislation	76
4	The Royal Prerogative	77
	The source of prerogative powers	78
	Post 1688—the revolutionary settlement	81
I.	The relationship between statute, the prerogative, and the rule of law	83
	Re Petition of Right (1915)	84
	The Zamora (1916)	84
	The superiority of statute over prerogative: A-G v De Keyser's Royal Hotel Ltd (1920)	85
	Extending De Keyser : Laker Airways Ltd v Department of Trade (1977)	88
	Extending Laker : R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Fire Brigades Union (1995)	89

II. The traditional perspective on judicial review of prerogative powers: and its erosion	90
‘Limited’ rather than ‘full’ review of prerogative powers	90
Developments in the 1960s and 1970s	92
Conclusion—the ‘constitutionality’ of reform	93
III. Full reviewability—the GCHQ case (1983)	94
The ‘nature’ not the ‘source’ of power as the determinant of reviewability	95
IV. Post- GCHQ developments	96
R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Northumbria Police Authority (1988)	96
Foreign affairs?	98
Excluded categories: a shrinking list?	99
V. ‘Justiciability’ revisited—are all statutory powers subject to full review?	99
Conclusion	100
Suggested further reading	103
Academic and political commentary	103
Case law and legislation	103

Part Two The Institutions and Operation of National Government

5 The House of Commons	107
Crown and commons—the original intent and the subsequent rise of ‘party’ politics	107
The fusion of powers, the rise of the party system, and cabinet dominance of the Commons	108
I. Setting the context	111
The sources of the Commons’ procedural rules	112
The Speaker	112
Resources	113
II. The passage of legislation	115
Second reading	116
Standing committees	117
Report and third reading	118
Conclusion	118
Private members’ Bills	119
Private Bills	120
Delegated legislation	121
‘Henry VIII clauses’	123
Conclusion	124
III. Controlling the executive	124
Motions on the floor of the house	125
Questions to Ministers	125
Prime Ministerial accountability on the floor of the house	127
Questions for written answer	128
Informal processes	128
The departmental select committee system	128

Conclusion	133
Suggested further reading	135
Academic and political commentary	135
6 The House of Lords	137
Bicameral legislatures: a functionalist justification	137
I. The historical background	138
Co-equality to complementarity: a conventional change	139
Lloyd George and the 'people's budget'	141
The Parliament Act 1911	144
The Salisbury Doctrine and the Parliament Act 1949	147
II. The House of Lords in the modern era	148
Life peerages	148
The 1968 reforms	149
The 1974–1979 parliament	151
The House of Lords and the Thatcher governments	153
III. The work of the House of Lords today	154
Deliberation	155
Revision of legislation	156
Control of delegated legislation	157
Scrutiny of the executive	158
IV. The 1999 reforms	159
The 'reformed' House of Lords	160
The recommendations of the Wakeham Commission	161
The 2001 White Paper	163
One parliament or three? Jackson v Attorney-General	165
Conclusion	168
Suggested further reading	169
Academic and political commentary	169
Case law and legislation	169
7 The Electoral System	170
I. The evolution of a 'democratic' electoral system?	170
The Great Reform Act 1832	171
The 1867–1884 reforms: towards a universal 'right' to vote and a 'fair' electoral contest	175
II. The contemporary electoral process	177
Apportionment—drawing constituency boundaries	178
The contents and conduct of election campaigns	180
Counting the vote	190
The 2010 election: a hung Parliament and a coalition government	193
Alternative voting systems	193
Conclusion	197
Suggested further reading	198
Academic and political commentary	198
Case law and legislation	198

8 Parliamentary Privilege	199
Article 9 of the Bill of Rights 1689	200
I. The admission, retention, and expulsion of members	201
Ashby v White	202
Paty's case	202
John Wilkes	203
Charles Bradlaugh	204
Freedom from imprisonment, arrest, and molestation	206
II. The justiciability of 'proceedings in Parliament'	208
What are 'proceedings in parliament'?	208
'Redefining parliament'— Pepper v Hart (1993)	210
III. The regulation of MPs' ethical standards	215
The register of members' interests	215
'Cash for questions' and the report of the Nolan Commission	217
The report of the Nicholls Committee	219
Parliamentary privilege and the expenses scandal	219
The Bribery Act 2010	220
Conclusion	221
Suggested further reading	222
Academic and political commentary	222
Case law and legislation	222
9 Constitutional Conventions	223
The Diceyan perspective—laws and conventions distinguished	224
The functions and sources of conventions	224
I. Collective ministerial responsibility	225
Confidence	226
Unanimity	227
Confidentiality	230
II. The Monarch	231
'On the advice of her Ministers'? The conventional 'democratisation' of the personal prerogatives	232
Refusing the Royal Assent	233
Choosing a Prime Minister in a hung Parliament	234
III. Collective ministerial responsibility revisited: from Cabinet to Prime Ministerial government...?	235
... And back again?	237
IV. Individual ministerial responsibility	238
Issues of competence	238
Errors of judgement	240
Issues of morality	242
V. Can conventions become laws? 2: Patriating the Canadian constitution	243
Patriating the Canadian constitution	244
VI. Turning convention into law: the 'Ponsonby rule' and the Constitutional Reform and Governance Act 2010	246

Conclusion—the conventional basis of parliamentary sovereignty?	248
Suggested further reading	250
Academic and political commentary	250
Case law and legislation	250

Part Three The Geographical Separation of Powers

10 Local Government	253
I. Localism, tradition, and the 'modernisation' of local government	254
The Municipal Corporations Act 1835	255
II. Local government's constitutional status in the early-twentieth-century—law and convention	258
The physical boundaries of local authorities	259
III. Taxation and representation: the fiscal autonomy of local government	261
IV. The role of the judiciary	262
The 'fiduciary duty' doctrine revisited (and subverted?)	263
Conclusion	264
V. Council housing	264
The Housing Finance Act 1972	266
VI. From 'ambivalence' to 'authoritarianism'	267
VII. Financial 'reform' 1: grant penalties and ratecapping	269
Ratecapping	269
VIII. Collective politics and individual rights: the judicial role	271
'Fares fair': Bromley London Borough Council v Greater London Council	271
IX. Institutional 'reform'; the abolition of the GLC and metropolitan counties	273
X. Privatising local government	274
The Widdicombe Report	274
Housing—individuated and collective privatisation	275
XI. Financial 'reform' 2: the community charge	277
A step too far? The demise of the poll tax	278
Conclusion	279
XII. The Blair government's reforms	280
The Local Government Acts 1999 and 2000	281
The governance of London	281
Conclusion	283
Suggested further reading	284
Academic and political commentary	284
Case law and legislation	284
11 Parliamentary Sovereignty within the European Union	285
I. The Treaty of Rome 1: founding principles	285
The types of EEC law and law-making processes	286

The status of EC law within the legal systems of the Member States	289
Questions of accessibility: the 'direct effect' of treaty articles	291
Questions of hierarchy: the 'precedence' of treaty articles over domestic legislation	293
II. United Kingdom accession	297
EEC membership and parliamentary sovereignty: the legislators' views—and their votes	298
The European Communities Act 1972—the passage	299
The European Communities Act 1972—the terms	299
Parliamentary sovereignty: a non-justiciable concept?	301
The 1975 referendum	301
III. EEC law, parliamentary sovereignty, and the UK courts: phase one	302
The end of the doctrine of implied repeal? Macarthys v Smith (1979)	303
A matter of interpretation? Garland v British Rail (1983)	304
IV. Political development in the 1980s	305
V. The end of parliamentary sovereignty? Or its reappearance?	306
The demise of the legal doctrine? Factortame	306
The reappearance of the political doctrine? Monetary union, collective ministerial responsibility, and the fall of Margaret Thatcher	312
VI. Maastricht and Amsterdam	315
The terms of the Maastricht Treaty	315
The ratification and incorporation of the Maastricht Treaty	316
The Treaty of Amsterdam	317
Conclusion—Nice and Lisbon	318
Suggested further reading	321
Academic and political commentary	321
Case law and legislation	322
12 The Governance of Scotland and Wales	323
The Scotland Act 1978 and the Wales Act 1978	324
I. The Scotland Act 1998	325
The terms of the Act	328
The first Scottish parliament and government	333
The 2003 and 2007 elections	334
The 2011 election and the independence referendum	335
The 2015 electoral landslide, the Smith Commission, and the Scotland Act 2016	337
Judicial evaluation of the autonomy of the Scots Parliament	339
II. Devolved government in Wales after 1998	342
The Government of Wales Act 1998	343
The Government of Wales Act 2006	346
The Wales Act 2014	347
Conclusion	348
Suggested further reading	348
Academic and political commentary	348
Case law and legislation	349

Part Four Administrative Law

13 Substantive Grounds of Judicial Review	353
I. Illegality	354
Excess of powers	354
Unlawful delegation of powers	361
Fettering of discretion	365
Estoppel	366
II. Irrationality	370
Irrationality as a 'substantive' concept: assessing 'the merits' of a governmental decision	370
Irrationality as a procedural concept: the relevant and irrelevant considerations principles	375
III. Proportionality—a new ground of review?	377
Bringing the courts closer to the 'merits' of a decision	377
Conclusion	380
Suggested further reading	380
Academic and political commentary	380
Case law and legislation	380
14 Procedural Grounds of Judicial Review	381
I. Audi alterem partem—the right to a fair hearing	382
The initial rise, dilution, and fall of the audi alterem partem principle	383
The re-emergence of the principle? Ridge v Baldwin	387
The emergence of the procedural fairness doctrine and the appearance of the legitimate expectation	389
Legitimate expectation—an entitlement to a procedural benefit or a substantive benefit?	392
The content of procedural fairness—legal representation and an obligation to give reasons for decisions	402
Conclusion	405
II. The rule against bias	405
Direct financial interests	406
Indirect financial interests—a mere suspicion or a real likelihood	406
Clarifying the law? The Gough formulae	408
Ideological bias in 'judicial' decisions	408
Further clarifying the law? The Porter v Magill formula	410
Bias in non-judicial proceedings	410
Conclusion	411
Suggested further reading	411
Academic and political commentary	411
Case law and legislation	411
15 Challenging Governmental Decisions: The Process	412
The turning point? Barnard v National Dock Labour Board	415
The Order 53 reforms	416
The initial Order 53 case law	417

I. O'Reilly v Mackman (1982)	419
Exceptions to the general principle?	421
II. The Post- O'Reilly case law	422
The flip side of the O'Reilly coin	424
A 'nature' not 'source' of power test—the Datafin (1987), Aga Khan (1993), Servite Houses (1999), and Wachmann (1993) decisions	425
The relevance of justiciability	428
III. Retreating from O'Reilly ? The Roy case	428
IV. Public law principle as a defence in criminal proceedings	430
Conclusion	432
Suggested further reading	433
Academic and political commentary	433
Case law and legislation	434
16 Locus Standi	435
I. The 'old' case law	436
Declaration and injunction—a restrictive test?	437
Certiorari and prohibition—an expansive test?	441
Mandamus—a broad or narrow test?	443
II. Section 31(3) of the Supreme Court (now Senior Courts) Act 1981 and the Inland Revenue Commissioners case	444
Should standing be a threshold issue?	445
Standing in the private law stream	446
III. Post- IRC developments	447
A 'citizen's action' test for standing under s 31(3)?	447
'Representative standing'	448
Conclusion	452
Suggested further reading	453
Academic and political commentary	453
Case law and legislation	454

Part Five Human Rights

17 Human Rights I: Traditional Perspectives	457
I. Privacy	458
Speech and communication	459
Sado-masochistic sexual behaviour	460
II. Freedom of speech	462
Official secrecy	463
The Official Secrets Act 1989	467
Blasphemy	469
Contempt of court	471
Political libels	473
Conclusion	476
Suggested further reading	476
Academic and political commentary	476
Case law and legislation	477

18 Human Rights II: Emergent Principles	478
I. The European Convention on Human Rights—introductory principles	478
Institutional and jurisdictional issues	479
The jurisprudential methodology of the Convention	480
II. The initial status of the ECHR in domestic law	484
Political responses—why did Parliament not ‘incorporate’ the ECHR?	484
Legal responses—the ECHR as a source of principle at common law	486
III. The impact of the ECHR on domestic law 1: privacy	488
Speech and communication	488
Sado-masochistic sexual behaviour	489
IV. The impact of the ECHR on domestic law 2: freedom of expression	490
Official secrecy	490
Political libels	491
Contempt of court	493
Blasphemy	496
Conclusion	499
Suggested further reading	502
Academic and political commentary	502
Case law and legislation	502
19 Human Rights III: New Substantive Grounds of Review	503
I. The (re-)emergence and consolidation of fundamental human rights as an indigenous principle of common law	504
Derbyshire County Council v Times Newspapers Ltd in the House of Lords	504
R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Leech (No 2)	505
R v Secretary of State for Social Security, ex p Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants	507
II. The ‘judicial supremacism’ controversy	507
Judgments of the ECJ and the ECtHR	507
Judgments in domestic courts on immigration policies	510
A judicial response	514
Lord Mustill’s analysis	516
Conclusion	517
Suggested further reading	517
Academic commentary	517
Case law and legislation	517
20 Human Rights IV: The Human Rights Act 1998	518
I. The terms of the Act	519
An ‘incorporation’ of ‘fundamental’ rights?	519
Sections 1 and 2: ‘Convention Rights’ under the HRA and Convention articles under the ECHR	521
Section 3—new rules of statutory interpretation?	522
Section 4—the ‘declaration of incompatibility’	524
The inter-relationship between s 3 and s 4	525
Sections 3 and 4 create consequential or secondary jurisdictions	525
Convention Rights and the common law	525
Section 6—the reach of the act: vertical (and horizontal?) effect	526
Convention Rights and the common law ... again ...	528

A special status for churches and the press?	532
Questions of procedure	533
On the separation of powers	535
Political entrenchment? A new 'rights' culture within government and parliament	536
Conclusion	537
Suggested further reading	540
Academic commentary	540
Case law and legislation	540
21 Human Rights V: The Impact of the Human Rights Act 1998	541
I. Convention Rights and Convention articles under s 2, statutory interpretation under s 3, and the use of declarations of incompatibility under s 4	541
The initial judicial reaction	542
A more structured approach to the meaning of 'possible' in s 3?
A distinction between 'systemic' and 'individuated' consequences	545
The notion of 'deference' to legislative judgment	552
And deference to the ECtHR?	555
The question of precedent	557
II. The horizontality of the Act	559
The meaning of 'public authorities'	559
An early analytical principle: the 'close assimilation' test	560
A more refined analytical principle? 'Core' and 'hybrid' or 'functional' public authorities	561
R (Beer) v Hampshire Farmers Market Ltd (2004)	562
YL v Birmingham and Others (2007)	563
Weaver v London and Quadrant Housing (2008)	565
Imposing Convention Rights on private individuals and organisations	566
III. Proportionality as a ground of review of executive action	571
The initial judicial response: the Daly and Alconbury cases	571
A more elaborate approach: the Denbigh High School and Miss Behavin cases	573
Blurring the issue? Doherty (2008), Pinnock (2009), and Powell (2010)	576
'Un-blurring' the issue? Quila (2012), Pham (2015), and Keyu (2016)	578
Conclusion	582
IV. Judicial supremacism revisited?	583
The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 55	583
The ouster clause provisions in the Immigration and Asylum Bill 2003	584
Conclusion	586
Suggested further reading	591
Academic commentary	591
Case law and legislation	591
22 Human Rights VI: Governmental Powers of Arrest and Detention	592
'Liberty' under Art 5 ECHR	593
The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984	594
I. Deprivation of liberty for 'ordinary' offences	595
Powers of arrest	595
Powers of detention after arrest	604
Powers of detention without arrest	605

II. Deprivation of liberty for 'terrorist' offences	610
Powers of arrest and detention in the 1945–1977 era	611
Powers of arrest and detention in the post-1977 era	617
Conclusion	622
Suggested further reading	623
Academic commentary	623
Case law and legislation	623
Part Six Conclusions
23 A Revolution by Due Process of Law? Leaving the European Union	627
I. The 2016 referendum	628
The referendum legislation	629
The campaign	634
The result	636
II. The Miller litigation	638
In the High Court	639
A unanimous court	639
Reaction(s) to the judgment	640
In the Supreme Court	642
Prerogative powers could not be used to override or compromise statutory provisions	643
What is the domestic status of EU law?	644
The significance of the referendum	645
The voice of the devolved legislatures	646
The dissenting judgments	647
Reaction(s) to the judgment	648
III. Negotiating the terms of departure	649
The 2017 general election	650
The May government's policy objectives	651
The 'Great Repeal Bill'	652
Conclusion	654
Suggested further reading	655
Academic commentary	655
Case law and legislation	655
24 Conclusion	656
I. Entrenchment of fundamental law revisited	657
Issues of legality and legitimacy	657
Questions of legitimacy	662
Conclusion	665
Suggested further reading	666
Academic commentary	666
Case law and legislation	666
Bibliography	667
Index	691