

Contents

List of Figures

xv

Introduction to the Paperback Edition

xvii

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| 1. Introduction—the Beginning of the End? | 1  |
| 1.1 The challenge for lawyers                    | 2         |
| 1.2 Four thoughts                                | 3         |
| 1.3 A journey                                    | 12        |
| 1.4 The Future of Law                     | 17        |
| 1.5 Progress over the last decade                | 19        |
| 1.6 The flow of this book                        | 23        |
| 2. The Path to Commoditization            | 27 |
| 2.1 The evolution of legal service               | 28        |
| 2.2 The pull of the market                       | 33        |
| 2.3 Opportunities for innovative lawyers         | 36        |
| 2.4 Some apparent failures explained             | 40        |
| 2.5 Decomposing and multi-sourcing               | 42        |
| 2.6 Two case studies                             | 53        |
| 3. Trends in Technology                   | 59 |
| 3.1 Exponential growth                           | 61        |
| 3.2 Information satisfaction                     | 65        |
| 3.3 Online community                             | 69        |
| 3.4 The Net Generation                           | 83        |
| 3.5 Clicks and mortals                           | 87        |
| 3.6 Disruptive technologies                      | 93        |
| 4. Disruptive Legal Technologies          | 99 |
| 4.1 Automated document assembly                  | 100       |
| 4.2 Relentless connectivity                      | 105       |
| 4.3 The electronic legal marketplace             | 108       |

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| 4.4 E-learning                                       | 114        |
| 4.5 Online legal guidance                            | 121        |
| 4.6 Legal open-sourcing                              | 125        |
| 4.7 Closed legal communities                         | 130        |
| 4.8 Workflow and project management                  | 136        |
| 4.9 Embedded legal knowledge                         | 141        |
| 5. The Future for In-house Lawyers            | 147 |
| 5.1 The asymmetry between lawyers and clients        | 148        |
| 5.2 The Law Firm Grid                                | 153        |
| 5.3 The importance of knowledge systems              | 158        |
| 5.4 The Client Grid                                  | 160        |
| 5.5 Data sharing                                     | 166        |
| 5.6 Knowledge sharing                                | 171        |
| 5.7 The challenge for clients                        | 174        |
| 6. Resolving and Avoiding Disputes            | 181 |
| 6.1 Reforms and changes                              | 184        |
| 6.2 Decomposing dispute resolution                   | 189        |
| 6.3 From litigation support to electronic disclosure | 192        |
| 6.4 Case management and electronic filing            | 201        |
| 6.5 Courtroom technology and judges                  | 210        |
| 6.6 Online dispute resolution                        | 217        |
| 6.7 Dispute avoidance                                | 224        |
| 7. Access to Law and to Justice               | 229 |
| 7.1 Redefining access to justice                     | 230        |
| 7.2 The building blocks of access to justice         | 235        |
| 7.3 The empowered citizen                            | 238        |
| 7.4 Streamlined law firms                            | 245        |
| 7.5 A healthy third sector                           | 249        |
| 7.6 Entrepreneurial alternative providers            | 253        |
| 7.7 Accessible legal information systems             | 255        |
| 7.8 Enlightened public information policy            | 263        |

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| 8. Conclusion—the Future of Lawyers | 269 |
| 8.1 The prognosis                          | 270        |
| 8.2 The implications                       | 278        |

|                     |     |
|---------------------|-----|
| Bibliography | 285 |
|---------------------|-----|

|  |        |
|--|--------|
| Index                                     | 293    |
| Figure 1 The Legal Market                        | xxv    |
| Figure 2 Firms and Clients                       | xxviii |
| Figure 3 Legal Providers                         | xxix   |
| Figure 4 Followers and Leaders                   | xli    |
| Figure 5 Billing                                 | xlii   |
| Figure 6 Tasks                                   | xlii   |
| Figure 7 The Target                              | xliii  |
| Figure 8 The Doughnut                            | xlv    |
| Figure 9 The Glazed Doughnut                     | xlv    |
| Figure 10 The Cog                                | xlviii |
| Figure 1.1 The Shift in Legal Paradigm           | 18     |
| Figure 2.1 The Evolution of Legal Service        | 29     |
| Figure 2.2 Scope for Innovation                  | 39     |
| Figure 2.3 Sources of Legal Service              | 47     |
| Figure 3.1 An Exponential Curve                  | 63     |
| Figure 5.1 The Law Firm Grid                     | 155    |
| Figure 5.2 The Client Grid                       | 161    |
| Figure 5.3 Aligning the Grids                    | 163    |
| Figure 5.4 Common Systems                        | 164    |
| Figure 5.5 Data and Knowledge Sharing            | 165    |
| Figure 5.6 A Hub or B2B Legal Exchange           | 171    |
| Figure 5.7 Disintermediation of In-house Lawyers | 180    |
| Figure 6.1 Categories of Case Management System  | 205    |
| Figure 7.1 The Client Service Chain              | 233    |