

Contents

1	The Physiology of Menstruation	1
1.1	Topic Overview	1
1.2	Major Players	2
1.2.1	The Tissues	2
1.2.2	The Hormones	6
1.3	The Sequence of Events	10
1.4	The Perception of Pain	16
	Additional Resources	17
2	Scope of the Problems	19
2.1	Topic Overview	19
2.2	Painful Periods	20
2.3	Heavy Periods	24
	References	27
3	How Our Views Have Evolved: Historical Perspectives	31
3.1	Overview	31
3.2	Menstruation and Menstrual Hygiene	31
3.3	Understanding Physiology	36
3.4	Recognition of Dysfunction	40
3.5	The Causes of Menstrual Dysfunction	44
3.6	Uterine Activity Studies	45
3.7	A Menstrual Toxin	47
3.8	Heavy Menstrual Flow	48
	References	51
4	The Clinical Classification and Causes of Dysmenorrhea	55
4.1	Topic Overview	55
4.2	Classification Schemes	55
4.3	Secondary Dysmenorrhea	57
4.4	Primary Dysmenorrhea	60
4.5	Risk Factors	62
	References	63

5	The Clinical Classification and Causes of Menorrhagia	65
5.1	Topic Overview	65
5.2	Classification Schemes	65
5.3	Secondary Menorrhagia	69
5.4	Primary Menorrhagia	71
5.5	Risk Factors	71
	References	72
6	The Role of Prostaglandins in Dysmenorrhea and Menorrhagia ...	75
6.1	Topic Overview	75
6.2	The Formation and Action of Prostaglandins	75
6.3	Prostaglandins in Reproduction, Dysmenorrhea, and Heavy Menstrual Bleeding	84
	References	86
7	The Inhibition of Prostaglandin Formation	89
7.1	Topic Overview	89
7.2	Cyclooxygenase Isoforms	89
7.3	Inhibiting Cyclooxygenase Formation and Function	91
7.4	Nonsteroidal Anti-inflammatory Drug Families	93
	References	98
8	Establishing the Diagnosis	101
8.1	Topic Overview	101
8.2	Dysmenorrhea	101
8.2.1	History	102
8.2.2	Physical Examination	104
8.2.3	Laboratory and Imaging	105
8.3	Menorrhagia	106
8.3.1	History	106
8.3.2	Physical Examination	107
8.3.3	Laboratory and Imaging	107
	References	110
9	Management Strategies for Primary Dysmenorrhea	115
9.1	Topic Overview	115
9.2	Pharmacologic Therapies	116
9.2.1	Nonsteroidal Anti-inflammatory Agents	117
9.2.2	Hormonal Therapies	120
9.2.3	Other Pharmacologic Therapies	121
9.3	Non-pharmacologic Treatments	122
9.3.1	Heat	123
9.3.2	Transcutaneous Electrical Nerve Stimulation	124
9.4	Lifestyle Modification	124
9.4.1	Dietary Interventions	125
9.4.2	Exercise	126
9.4.3	Complementary and Alternative Therapies	126

9.5 Surgical Treatment 128
 References 128

10 Management Strategies for Primary Menorrhagia 135

10.1 Topic Overview 135

10.2 Pharmacologic Therapies 136

 10.2.1 Hormonal Therapies 137

 10.2.2 Nonsteroidal Anti-inflammatory Agents 139

 10.2.3 Antifibrinolytics 140

 10.2.4 Complementary and Alternative Therapies 141

10.3 Surgical Options 142

References 143

11 Options for When Simple Managements Are Not Enough 149

11.1 Topic Overview 149

11.2 Reassessing the Current Treatment 149

 11.2.1 Dysmenorrhea 150

 11.2.2 Menorrhagia 152

11.3 Surgical Options 152

 11.3.1 Dysmenorrhea 153

 11.3.2 Heavy Menstrual Bleeding 153

References 155

Index 159

Menstrual pain and excessive menstrual bleeding are both extremely common conditions that affect women of reproductive age. This discussion will focus primarily on the uterus, leaving many of the nuances of the complex interactions of the hypothalamus, pituitary, and ovary to others.

Fig. 1.1 A male black and white elephant show (Africanus or petard) at the National Zoo in Washington, DC

