Contents

List of Figures xi
List of Tables xii
Acknowledgements xiii

1. To Be or Not to Be (British): Discourse, Integration and the Public Sphere 1
   1.1 Immigration and integration: Two sides of the same coin 1
   1.2 Why critical discourse? 3
   1.3 'Discourse', 'text' and 'context' 4
   1.4 The public sphere: A space for discursive constructions and discursive practices 6
      1.4.1 Models of the public sphere 6
      1.4.2 A public sphere, but who are 'the public'? 8
      1.4.3 A discursive public sphere 10
   1.5 Challenges of recent research 11
   1.6 Problems, hypotheses and questions 13
   1.7 The Discourse Historical Approach 14
   1.8 Categories of analysis 16
   1.9 Data triangulation 18
      1.9.1 Governmental policy documents and media articles 19
      1.9.2 Focus groups 21
   1.10 Plan of the book 23

2. Discourse, Race and Migration 25
   2.1 From biology to culture 25
   2.2 Social constructions of race 26
   2.3 Discursive constructions of race 30
   2.4 Concluding remarks 33

3. (En)Acting Integration 35
   3.1 Citizenship 36
      3.1.1 Formulations of citizenship 36
      3.1.2 A neoliberal discourse of citizenship 37
   3.2 Integration 40
      3.2.1 Theories of integration 40

3.2.2 Alternatives to multiculturalism 42
3.2.3 Practices of integration 44
3.3 Discursive practices of integration 48
3.4 Performing integration 50
3.5 Concluding remarks: Ideological performances 51

4. Historical and Socio-Political Contexts 53
4.1 Global and European socio-historical contexts 53
4.1.1 Historical global migration patterns 54
4.1.2 European immigration 55
4.1.3 European policy responses 58
4.2 The history of immigration and integration as political and politicized issues in the UK 59
4.2.1 The twentieth century: Shadows and forewarnings 61
4.2.2 Labour governments 1997–2010 63
4.3 The local context of Brighton and Hove 67
4.3.1 Inward migration and ethnic diversity 67
4.3.2 The local politics of immigration 69
4.4 Concluding remarks: Setting the scene 69

5. Analysis of Government Policy Texts 73
5.1 Integration and community cohesion in policy: A history of two concepts 74
5.2 The polysemy of 'community' 78
5.2.1 Locating the community 78
5.2.2 Being inside and outside the community 79
5.2.3 The nation as a wider community 81
5.3 The evolution of integration discourse 82
5.3.1 Topoi: The framing of integration as a problem 82
5.3.2 Integration as a normative phenomenon 84
5.3.3 The Sisyphean nature of integration 88
5.3.4 The linguistic agency of integration 89
5.4 Integration as performance 92
5.4.1 A neoliberal construction of integration 92
5.4.2 Discursive expectations of performative integration 93
5.5 Interdiscursive and intertextual links between integration and other policy areas 95
5.6 Concluding remarks 101

6. Analysis of Media Texts 103
6.1 A corpus analysis of media discourse 104
6.1.1 Word frequency 104
6.1.2 Concordance 105
6.2 Integration by any other name 110
6.3 Constructions of community 115
6.3.1 What is a community? 115
6.3.2 Exclusion and inclusion of migrants 117
6.4 The 'perfect' (British) citizen 122
6.4.1 British values 122
6.4.2 'Good' and 'bad' migrants 124
6.5 Examples of journalistic bad practice 127
6.6 Concluding remarks 129

7. Analysis of Focus Groups with Incoming Non-Nationals 131
7.1 Discourse topics 132
7.1.1 Primary and secondary discourse topics 132
7.1.2 Mapping thematic links 134
7.2 Doing integration: Patterns and links in discourse 138
7.2.1 Language 138
7.2.2 Sites of integration 142
7.2.3 The uniqueness of Brighton 145
7.3 Feeling integrated: (Dis)attachments, (non-)belongings and (multiple) memberships 147
7.3.1 Contradicting and confirming the 'Cricket test' 148
7.3.2 Part of something: Belonging and membership 152
7.3.3 Multiple memberships 158
7.4 Perspectives on the public sphere 162
7.4.1 Knowledge of public discourse 162
7.4.2 Understandings of 'integration' 166
7.5 Concluding remarks 171

8. Discussion and Conclusion: The Discursive Construction of Integration in the Public Sphere 173
8.1 Revisiting the discursive public sphere 173
8.2 Discourses of integration: From theory to practice, and back again 175
8.3 Final remarks 182
8.3.1 The consequences of an exclusionary discourse of integration 182
8.3.2 Reframing integration: Towards tentative solutions 183

Appendices 187
Appendix A: List of Policies and Reports Analysed 187
Appendix B: List of Articles Used as Examples in the Analysis 190
Appendix C: Discussion Topics and Question Prompts
Used for Focus Groups 192
Appendix D: Focus Group Participants 195

Notes 198
References 204
Index 219