

{ CONTENTS }

Acknowledgments	ix
Foreword: Insensitivity and Blindness	xi
Introduction: Resistance, Democratic Sensibilities, and the Cultivation of Perplexity	3
A. The Importance of Dissent and the Imperative of Epistemic Interaction	3
B. Resistance, Perplexity, and Multiperspectivalism	13
C. Overview	23
1. Active Ignorance, Epistemic Others, and Epistemic Friction	27
1.1. Active Ignorance and the Epistemic Vices of the Privileged	30
1.2. Lucidity and the Epistemic Virtues of the Oppressed	40
1.3. Resistance, Epistemic Responsibility, and the Regulative Principles of “Epistemic Friction”	48
2. Resistance as Epistemic Vice and as Epistemic Virtue	56
2.1. The Excess of Epistemic Authority and the Resulting Insensitivity	57
2.1.1. Epistemic Justice as Interactive, Comparative, and Contrastive	60
2.1.2. Differential Authority, Systematic Injustice, and the Social Imaginary	64
2.2. The Vice of Avoiding Epistemic Friction, Hermeneutical Injustice, and the Problem of “Meta-Blindness”	70
2.3. Striving for Open-Mindedness: Epistemic Friction and Epistemic Counterpoints as Correctives of Meta-Blindness	75
3. Imposed Silences and Shared Hermeneutical Responsibilities	90
3.1. Silences and the Communicative Approach to Epistemic Injustice	91
3.2. Communicative Pluralism and Hermeneutical Injustice	96
3.3. Our Hermeneutical Responsibilities with Respect to Multiple Publics	109
4. Epistemic Responsibility and Culpable Ignorance	119
4.1. Responsible Agency, Knowledge/Ignorance, and Social Injustice	121
4.2. Betraying One’s Responsibilities under Conditions of Oppression: Social Contextuality, Interconnectedness, and Culpable Ignorance	133
4.2.1. Pig Heads, Burning Crosses, and Car Keys	135
4.2.2. The Social Division of Cognitive Laziness	145
4.2.3. Blindness to Differences	150
4.2.4. Blindness to Social Relationality and the Relevance Dilemma	154
4.3. Overlapping Insensitivities, Culture-Blaming, and Gender Violence against Third World Women	161

5. Meta-Lucidity, “Epistemic Heroes,” and the Everyday Struggle Toward Epistemic Justice	186
5.1. Living Up to One’s Epistemic Responsibilities under Conditions of Oppression: “Meta-Lucidity”	187
5.2. Promoting Lucidity and Social Change	206
5.3. Echoing: Chained Action, “Epistemic Heroes,” and Social Networks	225
5.3.1. Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz: Epistemic Courage, Resistant Imagination, and Epistemic Friction	230
5.3.2. Rosa Parks: Counter-Performativity, Chained Agency, and Social Networks	234
6. Resistant Imaginations and Radical Solidarity	250
6.1. Pluralistic Communities of Resistance	258
6.2. Normative Pluralism and Radical Solidarity	266
6.3. Epistemic Friction and Insurrectionary Genealogies	281
6.4. Guerrilla Pluralism, Counter-Memories, and Epistemologies of Ignorance	289
6.5. Resistant Imaginations: Toward a Kaleidoscopic Social Sensibility	297
6.6. Conclusion: Network Solidarity	308
Coda	313
References	317
Index	327