

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction	1
1 Climate Change, Risk and Danger	11
The sceptics and their critics	18
The 'climate wars'	21
The radicals	26
Conclusion	31
2 Running Out, Running Down?	33
Peak oil	36
Sweating the assets	42
The struggle for resources	45
3 The Greens and After	48
The greens	49
Managing risk: the precautionary principle	55
'Sustainable development'	59
Over-development	63
Polluter pays	66
Ungreen themes	67
The politics of climate change: concepts	71

4	The Track Record So Far	76
	Sweden, Germany and Denmark	77
	Spain and Portugal	82
	The case of the UK	83
	Climate change policy and the US	87
	Lessons to be drawn	90
5	A Return to Planning?	94
	Planning, then and now	98
	Changing lives	103
	Foregrounding	112
	A political concordat	116
	State and society: business and the NGOs	120
6	Technologies and Taxes	129
	Technologies: where we stand	131
	The role of government	140
	Promoting job creation	146
	Carbon taxes	151
	Carbon rationing	157
	The re-emergence of utopia	160
7	The Politics of Adaptation	163
	Adaptation in the context of Europe	166
	Floods in the UK	170
	Insurance, hurricanes and typhoons	173
	Adaptation: the developing world	178
8	International Negotiations, the EU and Carbon Markets	185
	Further negotiations	189
	The role of the EU	195
	Carbon markets	198
9	The Geopolitics of Climate Change	203
	An illusory world community?	208
	The bottom billion	213
	Oil and geopolitics	217
	Coalitions and collaborations	220
	The US and China	222

India and Brazil	224
In conclusion: why we still need the UN	227
Afterword	229
Notes	233
References	245
Index	255

This work grew out of my involvement in a project organized under the auspices of the think-tank Policy Network and the Centre for the Study of Global Governance at the London School of Economics. I should like to thank my colleagues in both institutions for their help and advice during the writing process. My gratitude is due in particular to Roger Liddle, Orla Cramme, Simon Latham and Jade Groves at Policy Network; and to David Held at the Centre. Anne de Sartah helped the project in more ways than I can count. Karen Birdsell did a marvellous job for the first edition, checking footnotes and assembling the bibliography. Orla Cramme provided some important feedback on a draft manuscript. I owe an especially large debt to Hugh Compston, who commented in a meticulous way on an early version of the book, and to Johanna Juselius, who did the same at a later point. Victor Philip Dahlsten generously provided the funding for the collective project, so a big vote of thanks to him. I am indebted to everyone at Policy Press, including especially John Thompson, Gill Motley (as always), Sarah Lambert and Emma Hutchinson. I would like to thank Emma in particular for her attention to detail and for the amount of work she put into the project. Sarah was unfailingly helpful in preparing this new edition. Orla Cramme provided further critical comments. Special gratitude is due to Anna Wisbart, whose