

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Note	xi
Abbreviations	xiii
Foreword	xv
Preface	xix
1. Process Philosophy and Its Problems	1
I • The Nature of Process Philosophy	1
II • The Language Problem	3
III • The Language of Feeling	7
2. Science and the Modern World as a Romantic Version of Process and Reality	9
I • The Rhythms of Growth	9
II • Scientific Materialism and the Fallacy of Simple Location	10
III • Prehension as the Basis of Induction	15
IV • The Actual Occasion as a Space–Time Quantum	19
V • The Literary Experience	25
VI • Eternal Objects	28
VII • Creativity	35
VIII • God	37
3. The Speculative Scheme (PR, Part I)	41
I • The Nature of Speculative Philosophy	41
II • The Categorical Scheme and Derivative Notions	46
4. Discussions and Applications (PR, Part II)	60
I • Fact and Form	60
II • The Extensive Continuum	63
III • Order, Society, Organisms, and Environment	65
IV • The Modal Theory of Perception	75
a. Perception in the Mode of Causal Efficacy	78
b. Perception in the Mode of Presentational Immediacy	82
c. Perception in the Mode of Symbolic Reference	86
V • Prolegomenon to a Theory of Judgment: Propositions	93
VI • The Theory of Judgment	100
VII • Process: An Overview	105

5. The Structure of a Concrecence (PR, Part III)	107
I • The Nature of Genetic Analysis	107
II • The Nature of Feelings in General	108
III • The Primary Feelings	114
IV • Propositions and Feelings	119
V • Comparative Feelings	124
6. The Theory of Extension (PR, Part IV)	135
I • Coordinate Division	135
II • Extensive Connection	142
III • Flat Loci	150
IV • Strains	158
V • Measurement	163
7. God and the World (PR, Part V)	168
I • God the Redeemer	168
II • Concluding Meditations	179
Bibliography	185
Indices	187