

Contents

List of contributors	xi
Preface	xix
Acknowledgements	xxi
1 The ethics of well-being: Psychological health as the vanguard for sociological change	1
COLIN JAMES (ANU, AUSTRALIA AND UNIVERSITY OF NEWCASTLE, AUSTRALIA)
Introduction	1
In defence of methodology	3
Resilience is about meaning	6
Achievements of the well-being movement in legal education and practice	8
Change from the bottom up	11
Conclusion	12
2 Self-care as a professional virtue for lawyers	14
CAROLINE STREVENS (UNIVERSITY OF PORTSMOUTH, UK), RACHAEL FIELD (BOND UNIVERSITY, AUSTRALIA), AND NIGEL DUNCAN (THE CITY LAW SCHOOL, CITY UNIVERSITY, LONDON)
Introduction	14
What is self-care?	15
Understanding the legal profession and its stressors	19
The stressor of the power of the client	22
Junior Lawyers Division (JLD) resilience and well-being survey 2017/2018	23
The stressor of changes in public opinion about the profession	24
The stressor of technology	25
Conclusion	25

- 3 Values: The flip side of the well-being coin 27
VIVIEN HOLMES (ANU, AUSTRALIA)
- Introduction* 27
Values enactment and well-being 28
Which values? 30
Values, well-being and professionalism 31
Values education and well-being 32
Law school values and well-being in a hypercompetitive world 35
Ethics and well-being in the workplace: Ethical climate 37
Ethics and well-being in the workplace: Hypercompetition 39
Conclusion 40
- 4 Well-being and a positive professional identity in the legal profession: A snapshot of the UK Bar 42
RACHEL SPEARING (UK BAR) AND RACHAEL FIELD
(BOND UNIVERSITY AUSTRALIA)
- Introduction* 42
Positive professional identities for lawyers 45
Survey of UK barristers' perceptions of professional identity and well-being 51
Survey methodology 52
Survey results 53
Discussion 54
Future research 55
Conclusion 56
- 5 Determined to be professional, ethical and well 58
ANNEKA FERGUSON (ANU, AUSTRALIA) AND STEPHEN TANG
(ANU, AUSTRALIA)
- Introduction* 58
Well-being in legal education 59
Self-determination theory 60
Research context 62
Initial research results 62
Methodology 63
Survey participants 63
Depression Anxiety Stress Scale (DASS-21) 65
Satisfaction With Life Scale (SWLS) 65
Basic Psychological Needs Scale (BPNS) 66
Valuing Questionnaire (VQ) 66

Results 66
Hypothesis 1 – Psychological distress 66
Hypothesis 2 – Subjective well-being 67
Hypothesis 3 – Basic psychological needs 68
Hypothesis 4 – Values progress and obstruction 68
Hypothesis 5 – Basic psychological needs and distress/subjective well-being 68
Hypothesis 6 – Basic psychological needs, valuing and distress 69
Discussion 70
Self-determination theory 70
Values 71
Impact of results 71
Conclusion 73

- 6 The information gap: A comparative study of the paradigms shaping perceptions of career success for law undergraduates and professional legal training students in Australia and the latent implications of non-professional legal career opportunities for law graduates in England 74

BARRY YAU, DAVID CATANZARITI (ANU, AUSTRALIA) AND JOANNE ATKINSON (UNIVERSITY OF PORTSMOUTH, UK)

Introduction 74
The information gap and well-being 75
Bourdieu's tools 76
Method 79
Data analysis and themes 80
Dominance 80
Grades, very long hours, value of training contracts 82
Shock, awe and anxiety 83
Toxicity, atrocity and acceptance 83
Alterity and the next drop 84
'Quality' and self-reproduction 85
Conclusions 87
Acknowledgements 88

- 7 Widening the approach to ethics teaching and positively affecting the ethical professional identity of trainee solicitors in Ireland 89

FREDA GREALY (HEAD OF DIPLOMA CENTRE, LAW SOCIETY OF IRELAND)

Intervention overview 91
Trainees' reflections 93
Appreciative inquiry 94
Provide 'safe space' for discourse and reflection 96
Making room for uncomfortable conversations 98
Small group discussion with exemplars 100
Conclusion 102

8 Connectivity, socialisation and identity formation:
Exploring mental well-being in online distance learning law students 103

EMMA JONES (OPEN UNIVERSITY, UK)

Online distance learning and law students 103
The role of socialisation and identity formation 108
Socialisation and identity formation at a distance 111
A unique balance? 115

9 Which hat shall I wear today? Exploring the professional and ethical implications of law clinic supervision 117

MARGARET CASTLES (UNIVERSITY OF ADELAIDE, AUSTRALIA)
AND CAROL BOOTHBY (NORTHUMBRIA UNIVERSITY, UK)

Introduction 118
Pedagogy in clinic 121
Personalising learning 122
Autonomy support 122
Mentoring 123
Role modelling 124
Clinic and well-being 125
Well-being awareness in the UK and Australia 126
Cause and effect: Well-being and the role of traditional legal education models 127
Conclusion 129

10 Clinical legal education and the hidden curriculum in the neoliberal university in England and Wales 131

CAROLINE GIBBY (UNIVERSITY OF SUNDERLAND, UK)

Introduction 131
Background 131
The gaps 133

Clinical legal education (CLE) 135
The hidden curriculum and well-being 137
 Emotions: Emotional intelligence 137
 Empathy 138
 Cognition/understanding 139
 Values 140
Teaching developments 141
Conclusion 141

11 Resilience, positive motivation and professional identity:
 The experience of law clinic students working with real clients 143

NIGEL DUNCAN (THE CITY LAW SCHOOL, CITY UNIVERSITY, LONDON)

The three clinical options on the BPTC 143
 FRU (employment) option 143
 FRU (social security) option 144
 Domestic violence option 144
The research program 145
 Working with clients 146
 Working with opponents 147
 Working with judges 148
Resilience 149
 Interventions 150
 Developing resilience 151
Self-determination theory 152
Empathy 155
Conclusion 157

12 Meditation in legal education: The value added toward the well-being of law students 158

ANTHONY CULLEN AND LUGHAIKH KERIN
 (MIDDLESEX UNIVERSITY, LONDON)

Introduction 158
Defining meditation 158
The use of meditation in law schools 159
Development of student resilience 162
The broader context of responsibility for student well-being 165
Future research on the efficacy of meditation 168
Conclusion 170

13 Identity, well-being and law students 172

LYDIA BLEASDALE AND SARAH HUMPHREYS
(UNIVERSITY OF LEEDS, UK)

Introduction 172

Methodology 174

Well-being and identity 176

Student interview findings 178

Future lawyer identity 178

Academic achievement identity 180

Implications 182

Recommendations and conclusion 186

Index

189