

content — table des matières

interview — entretien

“Where are your clogs? You’ll catch a cold!” An interview with Josip

Novakovich (5–9)

Jason Blake

articles — articles

Qui sont aujourd’hui les nomades et les sédentaires

de la littérature québécoise ? (11–24)

Petr Kyloušek

The Conclusion of the American-Canadian Halibut Treaty of 1923 and Its Importance for British-Canadian Constitutional Relations (25–34)

Jaroslav Valkoun

Influences of Parents on Ethnic Identity Negotiation of Korean Immigrant Youths in Canada (35–45)

Lindsey Paek

Korean Diasporic Perceptions of Canada in the Light of the CBC TV Series
Kim’s Convenience (47–61)

Judit Nagy and Mátyás Bánhegyi

Voix identitaires et intimes dans Tout ce qu’on ne te dira pas, Mongo (63–75)

Georgeta Prada

Feelings of Isolation and Trauma from the Holocaust in the 20th-Century
Canadian Jewish Short Story (77–86)

Marián Gazdík

Heterotopic Narratives of Identity in Tamas Dobozy’s Short Stories (87–97)

Gertrud Szamosi

“An infernal masked ball” – Sándor Márai and Tamas Dobozy on the Siege of Budapest (99–110)

Katalin Kürtösi

Facettes de la femme exilée dans les romans de Ying Chen (111–126)

Carmen Andrei

Bridging Transcultural Boundaries in Carroll Aikins’s Play The God of Gods:
A Canadian Play (127–137)

Krisztina Kodó

Américanisation versus américanité : cadre théorique et manifestations pratiques dans le roman québécois contemporain (139–147)

Eva Voldřichová Beránková

The Stars on the Page, the Voice in the Sky: Myth, Ovid and the Cree Elders in Robert Bringhurst's Ursa Major (149–165)

Leonor María Martínez Serrano

Lecture écocritique du Porteur des peines du monde d'Yves Sioui Durand (167–179)

Mirna Sindičić Sabljo

reviews — comptes rendus

Daniel Heath Justice. Why Indigenous Literatures Matter (181–183)

Jason Blake

Stephen Hardy and Andrew C. Holman. Hockey: A Global History (185–187)

Attila Lénárt-Muszka