

Contents

---

Acknowledgements	x
List of abbreviations	xii
1 Wind of change: an introduction	1
2 The football fan activism complex	9
Socio-cultural and symbolic aspects of football	11
Security measures and policing	14
Stadium atmosphere and fan experience	16
Football governance: decision-making and mismanagement	18
Football fan activism and social issues	21
Political activism through fandom	23
The football fan activism complex and its dynamics	24
3 Fan activism in national and transnational contexts	33
England: continuity, sophistication and diversification	33
Italy: counter-culture, reactivity and hints of transition	36
The Czech Republic: passivity, disunity and reactive resistance	39
Fan activism in national contexts	41
Fan activism and the mass media	42
The dynamics between fans and authorities	45
4 Reflexivity and social change	57
Reflexivity in sport and football	58
Football fan reflexivity in the post-reflexive era	62
Reflexivity and its outcomes	64

---

-
- 5 Fans' struggle over policing, security measures and criminalisation 74
- Transmission: de-securitisation, de-criminalisation, dialogue* 75
- Auto-referentiality: counter-culture, wars and battles* 79
- Strategic appropriation: politics, power and business interests* 82
- Alteration: internal differentiation, alienation and aesthetisation* 85
- Loosening: activism misconceived and misunderstood* 87
- Anti-reflexivity: contesting representativeness and hiding protests* 89
- Conclusions* 91
- 6 Fans' struggle over socio-cultural aspects: identities, symbols and rituals 97
- Transmission: saving symbolic assets and protecting traditional identities* 99
- Auto-referentiality: maintaining symbolic and social distances* 102
- Strategic appropriation: defending symbols with secondary purposes* 104
- Alteration: unintended routes of activism* 107
- Loosening: losing the meaning of activism* 110
- Anti-reflexivity: discontent with discontent* 113
- Conclusions* 114
- 7 Fans' struggle over governance: mismanagement, involvement and ownership 121
- Transmission: transformation of legal, regulative and institutional frameworks* 124
- Auto-referentiality: reciprocal distrust and confirmed divisions* 126
- Strategic appropriation: talking the talk of engagement* 129
- Alteration: too far from the lived experience* 132
- Loosening: shadow of ideologies and economic reductionism* 135
- Anti-reflexivity: questioning evidence, representativeness and competencies* 137
- Conclusions* 138

8 Discussion and conclusions	144
Between social change and status quo: reflexivity successes     and reflexivity failures	145
New avenues of research: geographies, sports, agendas     and theoretical developments	149
Reflexivity: beyond sport and football	153
 Index	 159

Finally, I extend my grateful acknowledgement to my family, for their support and encouragement throughout the process of writing this book. The journey of this book was long and started with the preparation of a grant proposal for the Marie Curie Fellowship provided by the European Commission, without which this research would never have happened. The successful funding started my travels in the triangle between Italy, England and the Czech Republic and was facilitated by help and support on different sides.

My enormous gratitude goes to all research participants who generously spent their valuable time and shared with me their commitment to save their football passion. The list of supporters who shared with me their experiences would be very long and I will limit myself here to those with whom I met repeatedly and without whose openness the research process would have been much harder. I would like in particular to express my thanks to Světa Bata, Riccardo Bertolin, Tomáš Carnogurský, Stuart Dykes, Ben Shave, Daniel Velásquez and Daniela Würbs. My big thanks go to the football officials, policy-makers and journalists who were keen to exchange their ideas on fan issues.

I had a great chance to benefit from a stimulating research environment at Loughborough University that hosted the research project. A really big thank you goes to Richard Giulianotti who provided me with insightful comments and much needed feedback since the very beginning of the project. I am grateful that I could present my work at the sociology of sport group seminar at Loughborough as well as other different forums whose attendees provided me with a number of inspiring ideas and critical comments. In this regard, I have to mention research afternoons at my Alma Mater, the Department of Sociology at Masaryk University in Brno, the lecture given as part of the Department of Policy Analysis and Public Management Seminar Series at Bocconi University in Milan, two talks given in Prague, at the Institute of Sociology of the Czech Academy Science Seminar Series and at the Doctoral Conference in Sociology at Charles University, as well as the lecture given to the Carnegie Research Seminar Series at Leeds Beckett University. Talking about Leeds, I must extend my thanks for valuable suggestions and encouragement that I received during the project by Davide Stecchi.