

■ IN BRIEF	5	Boris vs. EU, Part 2 ● Trusted-untrusted names in news
■ AGENDA	6	NATO meets ● Alibaba earnings ● On to New Hampshire!
■ REMARKS	8	Battling the new coronavirus requires a true trans-Pacific partnership ● The outbreak's effect on the economy
1 BUSINESS	14	The industrial sector has consumer envy
	16	Ikea liberates Russia's apartment-block archipelago
	18	CEO Hans Vestberg is taking Verizon to the edge
2 TECHNOLOGY	20	▼ Just past a Pottery Barn in the East Bay, rocket maker Astra is plotting a satellite-launching spree

3 FINANCE	24	Warren Buffett cancels his newspaper subscription
	27	To get more women in seats, boards look down the ladder
4 ECONOMICS	28	Trump won't be able to prime the pump before November
	30	Russia, shrinking again, decides to keep immigrants out...
	31	...Uruguay, its growth slowing, tries to lure foreigners in
5 POLITICS	32	The Iowa caucus was anything but Iowa nice
	35	Chaos? There's an app for that
+ SOLUTIONS/ SMALL BUSINESS	36	Micro weather forecasts, inspired by adventure sports
	38	Worker-owned co-ops thrive as baby boomers retire
	39	The Israeli startup hoping to thwart mass shooters
■ PURSUITS	59	Some unexpected ways you can invest your bonus
	62	It turns out you can buy a good name
	64	The bro-och: Adornment for a dowager or dude
	66	Take a leap with a perpetual calendar watch
	67	Lose your wallet
■ LAST THING	68	A decade after the Deepwater spill, BP is still paying

FEATURES

40

Ken Fisher's Still Got Assets

A sexist quip sent some investors running—but plenty of others stuck with him

46

My Brief Life in the Ransomware Racket

Hacking is so easy now, our un-tech-savvy reporter could do it. Almost

52

In Berlin, the Rent Is Too Verdammt High

The once-cheap city is taking a novel approach to rising housing costs