

---

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	IX
Introduction: The Storyteller in American National Romance	XI
PART ONE: Imagining Cultural Origins in James Fenimore Cooper's The Spy	1
1 Storytelling on the Neutral Ground	3
2 The Creation of American Martyrs	12
3 From Revolutionary Legend to Historical Romance	36
4 Remembering the Revolution in The Spy	49
PART TWO: History's Revolutions in Nathaniel Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter
Letter	69
5 The Artifact in the Attic	71
6 New England's Revolution in Hiding	81
7 Hester Prynne's Ancestry	98
8 From Artifact to Archetype	106
PART THREE: "Traces of a Vanished World" in Owen Wister's The Virginian	133
9 Romance and Nostalgia in The Virginian	135
10 Imagined Contexts for Frontier Heroes	144
11 Storytelling and Evolution's Losses in The Virginian	160
Conclusion: The Storyteller's Legacy from Quentin Compson to Oedipa Maas	177
Notes	193
Bibliography	235
Index	251