

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
A Note on Transliteration, Translation, and Referencing	viii
Disclaimer	x
1 Introduction: The Late Soviet Union and Moscow's Artistic Underground	1
2 The Queue and Collective Speech	16
3 The Norm and Socialist Realism	29
4 Marina's Thirtieth Love and Dissident Narratives	43
5 A Novel and Classical Russian Literature	58
6 A Month in Dachau and Entangled Totalitarianisms	72
7 Sorokin's New Media Strategies and Civic Position in Post-Soviet Russia	86
8 Blue Lard and Pulp Fiction	98
9 Ice and Esoteric Fanaticism—a New Sorokin?	113
10 Day of the Oprichnik and Political (Anti-)Utopias	132
11 The Blizzard and Self-References of a Meta-Classic	151
12 Manaraga and Reactionary Anti-Globalism	165
13 Discontinuity in Continuity: Prospects	179
Bibliography	185
Index	219