

Contents

List of figures and tables	vii
About the author	ix
Foreword	xi
Acknowledgements	xv
1. Introduction	1
The bridge of civilisations	1
Rude awakening	5
The focus and structure of the book	9
2. Theory and practice: Jumping between different frames of references	13
Many approaches to nationalism and cosmopolitanism	14
Space and time in studies on nationalism and cosmopolitanism	20
User-centred paradigm in research of information practices	25
Centrality of context	28
Gap between theory and practice	31
3. Actor-network theory: An alternative approach	35
Actor, network, theory, without forgetting the hyphen	36
Sociology of associations	41
Plugging into nationalism and cosmopolitanism	48
Information cosmopolitics	54
4. Setting up the fieldwork	59
Following the actors in the field	59
Following the actors: Latour's circulatory system	67
5. The fieldwork	77
Mobilisation of the world	77
Autonomy	83
Alliances	90
Public representation	95
Links and knots	100
Summary	106

6. Some patterns in participants' information practices	109
7. Information cosmopolitics: A model of information practices	121
In-scription	122
De-scription	125
Contextualisation	129
Standardisation	132
Invitation to perplexity	135
8. Propositions instead of conclusions: Yet another invitation to perplexity	139
References	147
Index	163