- these costs by year 8, while society will have recouped its investment by year 12. 5.1
- 6.4 Countries' life expectancy at birth is a better measure of well-being than GDP per capita. 6.5
- ($A \rightarrow B \rightarrow C$) if B is held fixed while A increases. 7.1
- 7.1 The firm's output (O) increases from O_0 to O_1 if it increases its labor input by ΔL but keeps no capital fixed. 8.3
- 7.2 Aggregate production GDP is $GDP_0 + \delta GDP_0 M A$, where M is the multiplier with capital per worker (K/C) and δ depreciation. 8.8
- 7.3 Savings per worker is output per worker times the savings rate, s . Since the savings rate is less than 1, the sy curve lies below the ky curve. 15.2

- 7.4 To the left of the sy curve, y is positive, so $sy < y$. This is what is needed to keep the economy growing. 15.3
- 7.5 An increase in the savings rate would lead to higher capital accumulation (C) and depreciation (D), which together increase GDP . 15.5
- 7.6 An increase in the population growth rate (n) would lead to lower capital accumulation (C) and depreciation (D), which together decrease GDP . 15.6
- 7.7 An increase in the population growth rate (n) would lead to lower capital accumulation (C) and depreciation (D), which together decrease GDP . 15.7
- 7.8 GDP is proportional to y^{α} and y is proportional to sy . 15.8
- 7.9 Real wages in "old" countries like the United States have converged between 1990 and 2000. 15.9
- 7.10 While there seems to be no clear relationship between GDP per capita in 1990 and GDP per capita in 2000, there is a clear relationship between GDP per capita in 1990 and country growth rates. 15.10
- most populous developing countries (Brazil, India, China) have the lowest growth rates. 15.11
- 7.11 A country's share of world GDP has fallen from 1970 to 2000. 15.12
